U.S. to back arms sanctions

(c) New York Times

Washington — The United States has reportedly decided to support the imposition by the United Nations Security Council of a mandatory embargo on all arms sales to South Africa.

The significance of the move would not be its effect on American arms shipments to South Africa, which the United States has banned voluntarily since 1963, but in Washington's acceptance for the first time that the racial policies of the white government in Pretoria constitute a threat to international peace and security under the U.N. charter.

President Carter told an impromptu news conference in the White House Rose Garden Tuesday that the administration had made a decision about U.N. action against South Africa and that he believed it was "the right decision," but he declined to say what it was.

Other officials confirmed, however, that the administration had decided in principle to vote for a Security Council resolution that would prohibit all member countries of the United Nations from transferring arms and military supplies to South Africa.

The officials said the administration hoped to persuade other Security Council members to accept an initial time limit on the arms embargo as an incentive for South Africa to halt the suppression of black leaders and their white supporters that precipitated the current round of U.N. discussions of sanctions.

If satisfactory language could be agreed on with black African and other delegations, the officials said, the administration would be inclined to support a Security Council warning of economic action against South Africa if it failed to modify its racial policies.

They added, however, that no consideration is being given at present to U.S. support for the drastic economic sanctions against South Africa that have long been demanded by black African governments and other Third World countries.

All officials contacted warned that difficult negotiations lie ahead at the United Nations about the Security Council actions that the administration has now decided in principle to support at this stage.

Asked if he believed that Andrew Young, the chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations, could muster sufficient support for an American approach to the South African problem that the black Africans would regard as too moderate and too limited, an administration specialist hesitated, then said: "No, I think we will have to go further."

But officials concede that to push for more drastic action against South Africa now would be to risk alienating conservative forces in Congress and the country whose support is crucial for ratification of the Panama Canal treaties and other administration foreign policy objectives.

Carter's disclosure that he had made a basic decision on the actions against South Africa that the United States would support at the United Nations came during a brief exchange with reporters after a ceremonial signing of a Medicare antifraud bill.

He said he "hadn't had much experience with sanctions yet," but reminded the reporters that there were many varieties, including arms embargoes and economic sanctions.

"What we want is to have a resolution of the South African threats against the peace in Rhodesia and Namibia and also, of course, to have the rights of the South African people themselves protected," Carter said.

It was not clear what the President meant with his reference to Rhodesia. Until recently, the administration had hoped South Africa would try to help persuade the white minority government in Rhodesia to accept a British-American plan for a peaceful transition to majority rule in the former British colony.

"We're trying to coordinate our position, with not only our European and Western allies, but the friends we have made among the leaders of the African nations," Carter said. "And I think we've made the right decision."

Waverly offering sludge

Waverly — The city of Waverly is giving away free sewage sludge.

That fact may bring guffaws or gasps of astonishment from city-dwellers, but it's good news to local farmers.

Sewage sludge is an excellent fertilizer, Waverly City Councilman Roger Bartlett confirms. The town produces about 30,000 gallons of the sewage every three months.

The aerobic digester at the town's sewage treatment plant can only hold three months' supply, then the plea goes out to farmers to come and haul it away.

According to EPA guidelines, the material must not be applied within 1,000 feet of public water supplies or 500 feet of private wells.

It should not be used on root crops, such as potatoes or beets; dairy cattle should not be allowed to graze on a pasture for at least two months after treatment.

"Our sewage is almost totally human," said Bartlett, noting that it does not contain significant amounts of industrial chemicals.

Sludge has been used successfully by farmers near Beatrice, Falls City and other communities.

The sludge will be handled on a first-come, first-served basis, city officials report. To reserve a tankload, farmers may call 783-2312.

The sludge will be given free to anyone who can haul it away; a release form removing transportation liability from the city must be signed before hauling.

Ms. Fonda attacks corporations

Jane Fonda stumps for economic change

By Joe Hudson
Star Staff Writer

Those who think the views of Jane Fonda have mellowed in recent years are wrong, the 39-year-old actress insists.

True, in the late '60s and early '70s, Miss Fonda could be found speaking at anti-war rallies with her husband, Tom Hayden. Or she might be visiting North Vietnamese troops whose countrymen were shooting at U.S. soldiers in South Vietnam.

And true, her most publicized political activity of late consisted of mainstream activity — supporting her husband's candidacy in the California primary Senate race.

But Miss Fonda, speaking Tuesday night at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said she supports a radical change at the very core of the American economic system — a change to "economic democracy."

Speaking before an overflow audience at the Nebraska Union, Miss Fonda chose big corporations as her main target. The nation's largest firms control wages, prices and employment levels, she said. These firms — mainly through foreign investment tax breaks — don't pay their share of the nation's tax bill, she charged, and they exert a tremendous influence on government policy.

Corporations, she said, should be forced to open themselves to the public. In Miss Fonda's vision of economic democracy, firms would have labor, consumer and community representatives on their boards of directors.

These representatives would disrupt the "country-club atmosphere" of corporate boards, she said, and decisions made by the boards would benefit the general public, not the managers' bank accounts.

She insisted, however, that her ideas are "not socialistic," they merely involve an extension of the citizens' political rights into the economic sphere. And she said a growing number of Americans — perhaps now a majority — support many of her proposals.

Radicals of the '60s were denied participation in the normal political sphere, she said, but that has changed.

"We who stood on the outside . . . have created cracks and crevices and now can get inside (the political system)," she said.

Miss Fonda's outspokenness of the '60s, she said, was not "a crazy phase of my life that I passed through." Her continued activity indicates she is a lifelong "committed political woman," she added.

That commitment to politics will not include a run at public office until she's too old to continue her film career, she said.

However, husband Hayden, who was defeated last year in the Democratic primary, will run again, she said. When or for what he runs are unknown, she said, but the post "will probably be a state-wide office in California."

Miss Fonda warned of a "1984"-like future if corporations are not turned over to public control. When dissenters complain of continued high unemployment, inflation and environmental decay, she said, steps will be taken to silence the complainers, just like anti-war activists were intimidated in the '60s.

The FBI, she said, kept a thick stack of files on her, even though "I never broke the law."

Miss Fonda's appearance was protested by three NU Regents and the Lincoln Republican Women. "It's a free country," Miss Fonda said about the protests in a pre-speech press conference. "They have the right to object to my coming."

It's not Miss Fonda's radicalness, but her "particular side" that the protesters object to, she said in an apparent reference to an appearance earlier this fall by conservative William F. Buckley Jr., which stirred no such objections.

"Buckley is a radical on another side," Miss Fonda said.

Senators ready for budget work

Associated Press

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee this week begins pre-session work on the next budget, with intensive hearings planned on spending requests totaling significantly more than this year's nearly $500 million blueprint.

The budget panel will tackle budget proposals in which the top 10 spending agencies are asking as much in general fund money for fiscal 1978-79 as all the state's agencies got this year. The state has about 80 agencies, though most below the top group are small.

Bill Brunson, head of the legislative fiscal analyst's office, said the procedure probably will be similar to that of years passed because time won't permit the zero-based budgeting that has attracted interest of some lawmakers.

"I don't know that we have identified any activity or program that will be done by zero-based budgeting," he said. The method, he said, would be more of an analysis of needs within continuation and expanded portions of the budget requests.

The panel meets Friday to plan which agencies to call in over the next two months, including 14 days of hearings beginning Nov. 21.

Brunson said his staff members would be meeting individually with budget committee members before Friday to determine preferences and scheduling conflicts.

Brunson took the opportunity while explaining procedures and timing to note that his analysts will be acting in a "personalized central staff approach" even as they juggle other duties.

Those duties, in addition to the budget, include work on agency performance auditing and "sunset" review to establish if certain agencies should continue in existence.

Brunson's staff provided approximate figures on the top agencies, their requests and current appropriations. They follow:

University of Nebraska, $113.6 million request and $101 million currently; Education Department, $120.6 million and $96.6 million; Treasurer, $72.8 million and $65.7 million; Welfare, $62.7 million and $53.8 million.

Institutions, $40.1 million and $32.3 million; Revenue, $29.7 million and $27.2 million; State Colleges, $17.5 million and $15.6 million; Corrections, $17.3 million and $14.6 million.

Technical Community Colleges, request still not available, currently $14.1 million, and State Patrol, $11.6 million and $10.9 million.

Even figuring the tech schools at no increase, those 10 agencies are seeking $500 million.

You can't escape commercials by going to movies

New York (AP) — If you hope to escape the noisy barrage of commercials on television by taking in a movie, you may be in for an unpleasant surprise. Starting Wednesday, up to three minutes of commercials will appear before feature films on the silver screens in 1,800 theaters in major U.S. cities.

But the big-screen commercials won't be as obnoxious as many of those on television, says a spokesman for one theater chain.

Because the cost of the movie commercials is high — about $18 per 1,000 viewers compared with about $4 per 1,000 viewers for many television commercials — industry officials expect a "high class" product in the movie houses.

"These will be soft, entertaining commercials, not the kind of hard-sell commercial you see on TV for deodorants," said one spokesman.

"They'll be scenes like beautiful footage of skydivers falling through the sky and landing into logos of soft-drinks. That sort of thing."

In addition, spokesmen say that, unlike TV commercials, the movie ads will not interfere with the continuity of the show.

"Sure, the initial reaction might be resentment," said a spokesman for New York-area movie exhibitors. "After all, people leave their homes and televisions because they don't want to see commercials."

But he and others involved in the new trend say commercials in movie theaters are needed to help offset declining earnings. And, under one plan, proceeds from the commercials will be used to produce movies to counter what some theater owners say is a shortage of films.

A few theaters around the country have been experimenting recently with local ads for neighborhood businesses and some theaters have for years used still slides to advertise local businesses. But two new operations are set to begin using the commericals in movie houses on a nationwide basis.

Roger Hautchuel, a Frenchman whose firm already sells $20 million worth of movie-house advertising each year to European clients, said the American operation will begin Wednesday in 1,800 walk-in theaters in New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and other major cities.

Under Hautchuel's plan, each theater will run three minutes of commercials before each feature film. Movie-house owners will share in one-third of the proceeds.

Another firm, Cinemavision, Inc., of Nashville, Tenn., plans to begin producing three-minute blocks of commercials by mid-November. Within three months, the firm expects to be serving 4,000 theaters.

The two programs together would involve 5,800 theaters, most of them walk-ins. There are about 16,000 theaters, including drive-ins, in the United States.

Cinemavision spokesman Bill Woosley said some of the proceeds will go to a fund administered by a group which represents 5,500 exhibitors. The fund will be used to produce feature films to be offered for showing by theater owners who participate in the plan.

"The real problem (facing movie house owners) is a terrible shortage of product," said a spokesman for one group of owners. The exhibitors also say that profit margins are slipping as major movie production companies demand high rentals for movies.

"This makes it a very severe market and it's hard to survive," said Malcolm Green, a spokesman for a chain of 45 theaters in the Northeast. He said that without the advertising income, some theaters would have to close or boost ticket prices.

The industry spokesmen said research projects showed there would be little adverse moviegoer reaction to the commercials. But to help offset any possible resentment and criticism, many exhibitors are planning to distribute handbills to customers, explaining why the commercials are necessary.

Cold gift too much

Missoula, Mont. (AP) — Garland VanDinter has more ice cream than he can eat — or keep frozen — and doesn't know who to thank.

He was awakened by the doorbell at 5 a.m. one day this week. No one was in sight, but on his front proch was a three-gallon keg of chocolate ice cream. "The Pink Milkman Strikes," said an attached note.

VanDinter called the police, guessing that a creamery had been burglarized.

Several hours later a neighbor found another three gallons of ice cream on VanDinter's porch. This time it was vanilla. "The Pink Milkman Strikes Again," said a second note.

VanDinter again called police, but no burglary had been reported.

"I don't know how to take it," VanDinter laughed. "We want to thank the Pink Milkman, and we appreciate the donation. But he gave us too much."

Winona fugitive claims innocence

Winona, Minn. (UPI) — Donald Howard, a businessman who broke out of the jail where he was awaiting trial charged with hiring a killer to slay his wife, has written a letter claiming "the real killer is not even being pursued," The Winona Daily News reported Tuesday.

Howard, a 34-year-old hardware store owner, is charged with hiring an Illinois killer to slay his wife, Shirleen, last Aug. 13.

He escaped over the weekend from the Winona County Jail by sawing the lock off his second floor cell. Tuesday the newspaper printed a letter it said was sent to a reporter, Terry Borman.

In it Howard said he is innocent and was forced to confess. He said he had escaped "to force police to find the real killer." The letter was mailed Monday from LaCrosse, Wis., Howard's childhood home.

When Mrs. Howard was found dead in the basement of her home, police authorities originally speculated the killer was Robert E. Williams of Lincoln.

Williams is charged with the murder of two Lincoln women several days before the Howard slaying. Police officials have also linked Williams to a series of alleged crimes, including the murder of another woman, during a chase that led from Lincoln through Iowa and Minnesota, then to Chicago before ending again in Lincoln.

Williams has denied any connection with the Winona murder, police have said. Howard was arrested shortly after Williams' capture.

"The night of my arrest the police made me believe my two daughters and my mother and father would be killed if I did not help arrest Webber (Bruce Webber of Rockdale, Ill., who is charged with firing the death gun)," the letter said.

"At that point I would have told them anything to prevent that as I was unsure of what was going on. The law is wasting its time on Rinniker, Webber, Murphy and myself. None of us took anybody serious, and the real killer is not even being pursued.

"I had hopes the real killer would have come forward by now, but I guess that's only in the movies."

Raymond Rinniker, of LaCrosse is a boyhood friend of Howard who has told authorities Howard asked him last year to kill his wife. Charles Murphy of Arcadia, Wis., also said Howard asked him to get rid of his wife.

The letter said Howard fled because "I am not guilty, and I do mind taking someone else's pumishment."

"My leaving the situation behind does not imply guilt," his letter said, "but force the police to find the real killer. On my way north I am mailing two copies of this. I hope they get to hands that won't cover this letter up."

In a postscript, he said, "If ever caught, I won't offer any resistance. I don't like violence."

The return address on the envelope said:

Don Howard, c/o Winona County Jail.

A nationwide manhunt has been launched for Howard and a 23-year-old housewife, Nancy Brown, who police suspect may have helped him escape. She and her blue 1967 Camaro automobile have been missing since the escape.

A former high school homecoming queen, Mrs. Brown was a bookkeeper at Howard's downtown Cost-to-Coast Hardware Store.

Howard was scheduled to go on trial Nov. 7 on charges of first degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder.

The letter said he escaped by using material left behind by another prisoner.

"The last prisoner left traces of his tools and work," the letter said. "I thought I better finish what he started for my own sake and for the taxpayers of Winona County. It has taken almost two months since my wife's death to collect my thoughts and put the pieces of this mess together.

"The cost of keeping me in a cage for the rest of my life is estimated at $13,000 a year with no indication of restoring my family, only more hurt. My legal expenses will use up all the money I have used for my girls. They too will be a county expense."

Ohio man accused of stealing $1 million

New York (UPI) — Robert B. Beasley, a former executive vice president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., Tuesday was accused of stealing $1 million from a company fund set aside for illegal corporate political contributions.

Beasley, 63, of Akron, Ohio, was charged with wire fraud, mail fraud and interstate transportation of stolen property in a 40-count indictment filed by a federal grand jury.

The indictment alleges that Beasley used more than 20 bank accounts here and in other cities to conceal the theft. He allegedly removed the money from the funds under the guise of funding what the indictment called Firestone's illegal political contribution program.

Most of the money, the indictment said, was used by Beasley for personal reasons, including the purchase of securities, payments of interest on loans and repayments of principal amounts due on loans.

An internal company audit showed that illegal political contributions had been made to Democratic and Republican Party candidates in federal, state and local elections.

The time covered by the indictment was from November 1968 through June 1975 when Beasley was exeuctive vice president.

In announcing the indictment, U.S. Attorney Robert Fiske said the charges result from a 10-month investigation by his office and the FBI.

Firestone, the indictment said, had a program of funding political contributions from corporate funds beginning about 1960 and continuing at least until May 1973.

Beasley was given complete responsibility and discretion in developing the methods to fund the program in a way to avoid detection by Firestone's auditors, the indictment said.

"Having devised these methods," the indictment said, "Beasley then utilized them to defraud Firestone by obtaining without detection additional corporate moneys for his personal use."

As part of the alleged scheme, Beasley opened bank accounts in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Akron, and Nashville, Tenn., to conceal the thefts.

Beasley is scheduled for arraignment on the charges in U.S. District Court Nov. 3. If convicted, he faces up to five years in prison and fines of $10,000 on each of the 40 charges.

Youth charged with murdering family

Brunswick, Ohio (AP) — An athletic college freshman has confessed to beating his parents and two brothers with a baseball bat, pouring gasoline over their bodies and setting them on fire, police said Tuesday.

Although Michael Swihart, 18, allegedly admitted to the deaths, his motive was either not known or not being disclosed by police.

Swihart was charged with four counts of aggravated murder after his confession late Monday night.

Brunswick Police Chief Clayton Crook said that on Sunday night, Swihart beat his father Donald, 41; his mother, Sue Ellen, 40; and his brothers Brian, 16, and Russell, 9, with a baseball bat; doused their bodies and lit the fuel.

Medina County Coroner Andrew Karson said the father died of multiple head wounds inflicted by the bat. He added that the other family members also suffered extensive head injuries and were either unconscious or dead prior to the fire.

Police said Michael had spent the weekend at his parent's home in a fashionable section of Brunswick where houses cost an average of $60,000 to $80,000.

A neighbor, Gary Reffert, 16, said that he talked with Michael on Sunday and that Swihart seemed "happy and anxious to get back to college."

Reffert said Michael went into the house and got a picture of his girlfriend to show. "Then he said he had to go in and eat," Reffert said. "That was the last I saw of him."

After allegedly killing his family and burning the home, police said, Michael picked up a friend and drove to Oxford, Ohio, where he is a freshman at Miami University. Police called Michael at the university and the young man was driven back home.

Michael, as well as his brothers, were all active in sports, neighbors said. They described him as a polite youngster who played ball a lot. The elder Swihart was recalled as energetic and the mother as involved in community affairs.

Donald Swihart was a representative for Hilti Fastening Systems, a firm with headquarters in Decatur, Ga. The family here from Georgia last year.

Celebrity who got lost given tour for birthday

Augusta, Maine (AP) — Erwin Kreuz, a West German tourist who has been a Maine celebrity since he got lost en route to San Francisco, got a tour of Maine's Capitol on his 50th birthday Tuesday.

Gov. James B. Longley welcomed Kreuz, saying that the United States is a nation of immigrants and is proud to have him as a visitor.

Kreuz, a Bavarian brewery worker, then got a tour of the Statehouse.

Kreuz stepped off a charter flight when it made a refueling stop in Bangor last week. He spent four days in the city before he met some German-speaking people and found out he was not on the West Coast.

"As a governor who sometimes wonders where he's at, I understand what happened to you," the governor told Kreuz through interpreters.

The owners of a German-American restaurant in Bangor accompanied Kreuz on the trip to Augusta.

Cheaters face stiffer penalties

Washington (AP) — President Carter, complaining that Medicare and Medicaid programs too often "have been shot through with fraud," signed into law Tuesday a bill imposing harsher penalties on doctors, hospital and nursing home officials and others who cheat the government.

The new law makes felonies out of most fraudulent acts committed by health care providers and increases penalties. Formerly classed as misdemeanors, the offenses carry maximum penalties of five years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

John Wayne backs canal treaties

Washington (UPI) — Actor John Wayne, usually a voice for conservative causes, said in the Washington Post Tuesday he supports the Panama Canal treaties because they show the "justice and reason" Americans have exhibited for 200 years.

The Post published Wayne's article on its opinion page with an accompanying picture of "the Duke" dressed in Western garb, sitting on a horse and holding a carbine.

In his article, Wayne said his interest in Panama goes back to the 1940s when he became friendly with Panamanian President Harmodio Arias, whose son Tony was godfather to one of Wayne's daughters.

Wayne said he stood up for Panama when the State Department decided to charge high prices to leading Panamanian families whose children attended Canal Zone schools. He said he figured "that with their children attending our schools they would have our point of view."

In the 1950s, however, Wayne said he thought the United States went too far for Panama.

"I was appalled when General Eisenhower appeared to have given the sovereignty of the canal away by allowing the Panamanian flag to fly there," he said. "But at that time neither Congress nor the press nor the conservatives uttered any kind of cry.

"I did, but it was a voice in the wilderness."

Wayne said, though, he eventually discovered that while the United States owned the canal, Panama never had given up sovereignty over the area and thus had a right to fly its flag there.

Wayne said he favors the pacts "on the basis of my belief that America always looks to the future and that our people have demonstrated qualities of justice and reason for 200 years.

Occupiers of Statue of Liberty are rounded up

New York (AP) — Puerto Rican nationalists occupied the Statue of Liberty for nine hours Tuesday and draped its forehead with a Puerto Rican flag before officials moved in and rounded them up.

The protesters, members of the New York Committee to Free the Puerto Rican Nationalist Prisoners, had demanded independence for Puerto Rico and an end to discrimination against Puerto Ricans.

Officials moved in at nightfall — about nine hours after the group came ashore from the day's first ferry run — and peacefully arrested 25 to 30 persons.

New undressed look is from Yves Saint Laurent.

Paris — There's nothing more satisfying to watch than Yves Saint Laurent collection when he gets his act together. He's left the world of fantasy and exotica that has had him in thrall for more than a year and re-entered the contemporary era, for which he, more than any other designer, has set the clothing style.

Russian peasants and mandarin Chinese as fashion influences have receded, leaving their mark only as a bit of quilting or a shape of a jacket.

The clothes have the casual, uncontrived look — they seem as if they just happened — that is his major contribution to modern dressing. They have the relaxed air of work clothes or uniforms plus the element of style. Many were in fatigue green. Along with muted plum and wine tones and some mustard, they provided a serious undertone for the clothes that made the gay, vibrant pastels other designers are emphasizing seem mindlessly frivolous.

Still, as the spring ready-to-wear collection continued to be shown Monday morning to a riveted audience for almost two hours, an astonishing color sense came to the fore. Whether it was the mixture of mustard, fatigue green and brown in three horizontal bands in a hip-belted dress or teal blue jacket over a wine shirt and metallic green pants, the combinations were arresting.

As the showing progressed, some clear, stronger colors came into play, such as red or green for flounced evening styles, but the effect would often be muted by a devastating outfit in, say, medium brown.

Many observers found it Saint Laurent's most powerful color statement since his Mondrian-inspired collection of the early 1960s.

The simple shapes includes a bloused battle jacket with a wide waistband on which a narrow belt was superimposed, bloused sweaters and a variety of trousers. The pants usually had a high waistband, belted like the battle jacket, and tapered to the ankles. Many were shown with the hems folded up at varying heights.

Another type of trouser was cut fuller over the hips and cuffed just below the knee in a modified Dutch boy effect. Pants overshadowed skirts in the collection, but still there was a beauty in the show. A very full knitted style, it wrapped to one side, moved beautifully, and was shown with shirts or sweaters and the signature battle jacket in beige, navy and fatigue green, typical collection colors.

There were touches of whimsy too — a Saint Laurent collection couldn't exist without them. They included bare midriff tops and pants, both knitted. The pants fit low on the hipbone, leaving quite an expanse of midriff exposed. There were tiny skirts that wrapped about the hips, leaving quite a bit of everything exposed.

Later on, they turned up wrapped over pants, which made for less exposure but a rather bulky look.

The most enchanting evening dresses had puffy sleeves and puffy skirts and were in muted wallpaper patterns or stripes. Some were printed with butterflies, doves, or checked effects, but never flowers. There are plenty of flowers all over Paris. Like a woman who figures out what everybody else is going to wear to a party and then dresses counter to the trend, Saint Laurent makes his own distinctive statement. Ruffles, yes, but no flowers.

The Saint Laurent collection packed such a wallop, it eclipsed two other big-names shows, but both designers seemed to have other things on their minds.

After showing a collection of very casual play clothes, Pierre Cardin rushed to the stage to invite the audience to the exhibit of drawings by Brunetta Mateldi, the Italian fashion artist, installed a few flights downstairs at his Espace Cardin.

"She has captured the spirit of her era better than almost anybody," he told those whom he gave a personally conducted tour.

Givenchy's male models looked so dashing they overshadowed the women's clothes. One of his best ideas for men included pants and vest in corduroy mated with jackets in linen, or a mixture of linen with silk or wool.

His men's sweaters in an open fishnet stitch marked by a few solid color bars are also attractive.

The most advanced of his women's styles is a sort of culotte-dress (some call it a short jumpsuit) that fits loosely all over and indicates how important new kinds of pants are considered here. The prettiest dress, for evening, is in printed chiffon with handkerchief points to the skirt and a halter neckline.

5,000 TR-7 cars are recalled for defective cables

Washington (AP) — About 5,000 TR-7 automobiles are being recalled by British Leyland Motors to replace defective accelerator cables, the U.S. National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Tuesday.

The recall involves 1975 and 1976 models sold in the United States and is the result of the agency's investigation of the cable problem. The cable links the accelerator with the carburetor.

"A partial cable failure may cause the accelerator to stick in the open position," said agency administrator Joan Claybrook. "A complete failure will result in the loss of engine power.

"Either failure is extremely dangerous," she said. "Drivers experiencing the partial failure should shift into neutral or turn the ignition off."

British Leyland already has replaced 15,000 cables under a quality assurance program. It decided to launch the safety recall program after the agency began its investigation of the defect.

Claybrook warned: "I am advising the motor vehicle industry that any attempt to avoid a statutory responsibility for conducting a safety recall by conducting a less rigorous product improvement campaign will be considered a violation of the safety act and may result in injunctive sanctions and civil penalties."

Arab official killed in airport ambush

Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates (AP) — A top official of the United Arab Emirates was shot and killed Tuesday in a burst of gunfire apparently meant for Syria's foreign minister.

Police sources said a white-robed Palestinian gunman from Syria was arrested while trying to hijack a Czechoslovak cargo plane after the shooting at Abu Dhabi Airport, but three other gunmen escaped.

Saif bin Ghobash, 47, minister of state and No. 2 man in the Foreign Ministry, was shot while seeing off Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam. Ghobash suffered bullet wounds in the chest and arm and died at a military hospital.

Khaddam, who was not harmed, later told reporters in Damascus there were several gunmen and "they came from Baghdad," seat of the government in Iraq. The two countries are ruled by rival factions of the Socialist Baathist Party.

Syria has blamed Iraq for several terrorist attacks in Damascus in the past year, including an attempt to assassinate Khaddam on Dec. 1. Two gunmen on a motorcycle wounded him in the arm.

The Syrian government is also opposed by extremist Palestinians who object to its stated willingness to reach a political settlement with Israel and its intervention that ended Lebanon's 1975-76 civil war.

There was little doubt in this emirate confederation at the mouth of the Persian Gulf that Khaddam, one of Syrian President Hafez Assad's closest advisers, was the target of Tuesday's attack.

"Ghobash had no political enemies that we know of," a well-informed source said.

Ghobash had been minister of state for foreign affairs since 1973. He had studied civil engineering and international relations in Iraq and the Soviet Union. He and his Russian-born wife had four children.

The cabinet held an emergency meeting and pledged to take measures against unnamed elements "exploiting our generosity and hospitality to carry into the country their conflicts."

An Arab reporter covering the departure ceremony said one or more gunmen fired pistols as Ghobash and Khaddam entered a departure lounge. The Syrian minister jumped aside and ran and Ghobash dropped to the floor, blood spilling from the front of his robes, the reporter said.

Airport officials said one gunman took seven airport workers hostage after the shooting and forced them into a Czechoslovak cargo plane in an attempt to hijack it, but he was arrested.

Police held him for questioning but withheld his name.

Ivory hunters kill elephants with rockets

Johannesburg, South Africa (UPI) — Ivory hunters, some using rockets fired from helicopters, killed between 100,000 and 400,000 elephants in Africa during 1976, a wildlife conservationist said Tuesday.

Iain Douglas-Hamilton, an international authority on elephants, told the World Wilderness Congress that unless something is done to check the demand for ivory, the elephant population could become endangered like that of the great blue whale.

Douglas-Hamilton said that in Chad, on the southern fringe of the Sahara, there were reports the army had used rockets to fire at elephants from helicoptors in the chase to feed the world ivory market.

"In Sudan, I have received very recent reports that some tribes are still burning elephants to death by setting alight the long grass around a herd," Douglas-Hamilton, who is based in Kanya, told the congress.

"In all Africa, ivory leaving in 1976 may have come from anything between 100,000 and 400,000 elephants and there seems to be no letup in the demand," he said.

Douglas-Hamilton said he arrived at the figures "after weighing thousands of tusks in Dar es Salaam's (Tanzania) weighing rooms."

He said the estimate would be correct if the tusks weighed in Dar es Salaam "were representative of tusks all over the continent."

He also said he included in his figures elephants which died from natural causes and were culled in countries like South Africa and Rhodesia.

Douglas-Hamilton said elephants had been seriously "overexploited, particularly since the tenfold rise in the price of ivory since the late 1960s."

Hong Kong last year imported 710 tons of ivory — taken from 71,000 elephants — from Africa, he said. This was equivalent to the entire elephant population of South Africa.

Ivory was being exported also to Japan, China, India, the Middle East, Europe and the United States.

West Germany urges nations to covenant against barbarism

Stuttgart, West Germany (AP) — West Germany, burying its most prominent victim of terrorists, urged other nations Tuesday to adopt covenants against terrorism before it spreads "like a wild fire over the whole world."

President Walter Scheel told 1,200 mourners at the funeral of industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer that the battle against terrorism is "the fight of civilization against a barbarism that destroys us all."

During the nationally televised service, Scheel asked the victim's family "for forgiveness" because of the government's inability to rescue Schleyer, president of the West German employers' and industry associations and the country's best known spokesman for big business.

Scheel said that if the government had bowed to the kidnapers' demands and released 11 jailed terrorists, "that would probably have been the start of the wild fire of which I spoke."

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and his cabinet joined leaders of German industry and business in paying respects to Schleyer, who was found shot to death last Wednesday in an abandoned car in Mulhouse, France.

Schleyer, 62, was abducted Sept. 5 by the Red Army Faction. Police believe he was slain last Tuesday after West German commandos foiled an air hijacking staged to reinforce his abductors demands. Three terrorists among those whose release the kidnapers had asked as ransom were found dead in their cells that day in what the government called suicides.

Their deaths triggered attacks on German property throughout Europe by extremists who believed the three were murdered. The Foreign Ministry announced Tuesday it was stepping up security at West German embassies and consulates around the world.

During the funeral Mass, Schleyer's widow, Waltrude, sat between Scheel and Schmidt. Her four adult sons and their families sat near-by.

Schleyer's body, which was not in the church for the service, was to be buried in a private cemetery in Stuttgart.

The ceremony, featuring Mozart's "Requiem Aerternam," was reminiscent of state funerals for banker Juergen Ponto and Chief Prosecutor Siegfried Buback, slain by terrorists earlier this year.

The Federal Criminal Office believes Ponto, Buback and Schleyer were killed by the same terrorist cell, a splinter group of the Baader-Meinhof gang. Sixteen persons are sought in the killings.

In Bremen, an attorney for imprisoned terrorist Irmgard Moeller denied she was part of a suicide pact with the three prisoners who died. The government says Miss Moeller, who is recovering from a stab wound, tried to kill herself with a bread knife the day Andreas Baader, Jan-Carl Raspe and Gudrun Ensslin were found dead.

The three terrorists are to be buried Thursday in a common grave in the same Stuttgart cemetery as Theodor Heuss, first president of West Germany. The decision by Mayor Manfred Rommel to allow their burial there raised protests from local residents.

But Rommel, son of the legendary World War II Gen. Erwin Rommel, said, "Emnity has to end somewhere, and in this case it ends for me in death."

Ottumwa scene of short campaign

Ottumwa, Iowa (UPI) — Jeff Goodroad may have had the shortest campaign in history — less than 12 hours.

Goodroad, 20, competed unsuccesfully in last week's primary election for city parks commissioner. But that did not stop him.

He announced his candidacy for a write-in vote Tuesday morning urging all Ottumwans to support his bid to unseat incumbent Jerry Parker.

The race was shortlived.

He changed his mind and withdrew Tuesday afternoon after some questions were raised about his qualifications — including reported employment with the Bettendorf city parks when he was 12 years old.

Parker called the short campaign "grandstanding."

Goodroad just said the city has not heard the end of him.

What about a tax write-off for the two-shot breakfast?

Mike Royko

Chicago — The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has predicted that if the write-off for the three-martini business lunch is threatened by President Carter's tax reform, anger will sweep across the nation. People will be so mad that Carter's entire tax-reform package might be toppled.

I doubt that. Over the years, I've done some research on this general subject. Not taxes, but the drinking of martinis and other refreshments. And it is my impression that the average American is self-reliant and independent and manages to get sloshed without any help from the federal government in the form of a write-off.

So why would they care if corporate boozers no longer get what amounts to a federal subsidy everytime they have a squirt?

And they probably don't buy the argument that the three-martini lunch or postwork cocktails are essential to doing business.

People do business all the time without buying each other martinis. I have holes in my roof, so a roofer recently came around to look at it and quote a price. He didn't take out a pint and offer me a swig. If he had, I don't think he would have been able to deduct that swig from his taxes. Nor would it have helped him get the business, because I'd be afraid that he would fall through the roof into the kitchen sink.

So why do we have this tradition of corporations feeling that the federal government should assume part of the cost of their executives getting loaded at noon, or while they are weaving down the street during a convention? If an ordinary sot wanders into a topless joint and buys some young thing a quart of champagne, he winds up with a hangover and a screaming wife. The conventioner winds up with a tax break.

Besides, most of them aren't drinking those three martinis to close a big deal or make a sale. They have them in order to calm their nerves so they can go back and face a harrowing afternoon of protecting their backs from other executives. Or to steady their hand for a try at someone else's back.

So how does that make their three martinis any more a necessity than the eye-opener taken each morning by Mr. Grobnik, Slats Grobnik's father?

Mr. Grobnik could have argued that the eye-opener was a business necessity because he had a nerve-wracking job he couldn't face without a liquid propellant.

He worked for many years as the quality control inspector in a garbage can factory. Every 30 seconds a new can would tumble off the assembly line. Two men would pick it up, turn it upside down, and lower it over Mr. Grobnik's head. He would twirl around five times, looking for holes in it.

That's all he did from morning until quitting time. He spun around and around, peering at the inside of garbage cans.

In order to endure this terrible professional stress, he would begin each day by slipping in the side door of Fat Frank's tavern and having a hardboiled egg and what could be called a two-shot breakfast.

During his noon break he would have a two-swigs-from-the-Jim Beam-pint lunch.

And after work, to wind down and stop twirling, he would have an aperitif, usually a boilermaker.

These should have been considered legitimate business expenses, since he couldn't pursue the essential business of earning his paycheck without them. But he wasn't permitted to write them off, while the president of the garbage can company could deduct his martinis. And nobody ever lowered a can over the president's head.

This inequity continues today. Millions of workers have jobs that give them frazzled nerves. But they can't claim their lunchtime snapper, or after-work six-pack on their tax records. And for many people of modest means, the tax savings probably would mean a lot more than it does to General Motors or Standard Oil.

For example, I have an uncle who budgets about 60 per cent of his income for something to drink. This causes my aunt to have to hold three jobs to make ends meet. That in turn causes my uncle to drink more because he feels bad that she has to work so hard.

But if he were a corporate executive, he could write off half of those drinks, which would deprive the, government of tax revenue. And that would mean that his wife would have to hold only two jobs, which would be a loss of even more revenue. At that rate the country would go broke.

Ending or reducing the three-martini write-off doesn't mean that executives and businessmen would have to abstain. They could get the same results by buying liquor in bulk quantities, issuing every executive a hip flask, and telling them to sneak a nip when the waiter isn't looking. Smart consumers have been doing that for years. I have a frugal friend who eats a $1.25 lunch every day in a Wimpy's, but with the help of his hip flask he sometimes walks back to his job on all fours.

I'm really surprised at the Chamber of Commerce people. They are the kind who yell the loudest when they think welfare checks are getting too high. Now they defend a form of welfare for thirsty corporate vice presidents. They must be turning into socialists.

Or maybe they're drinking too many martinis.

County roads impasse: a 'no fault' flap

The flap between County Engineer Marv Nuernberger and the Lancaster County Board over roads might be classed as a no fault situation. Not known for being bashful, Nuernberger has said the board does not understand his budget and, therefore, he is not getting enough road dollars.

The board says Nuernberger got what he asked for, so if it isn't enough, it is his fault. That is at least the essence of the situation as we understand it.

In that kind of situation, it would be pretty hard to choose up sides. The truth is that the board has provided Nuernberger with annual increased funding, but not as much as the county engineer wanted.

The board, of course, has an obligation to all county departments and must consider appropriations for all when looking at any one of them. Under those conditions and with county funds being tight, Nuernberger is unrealistic to think he might get all that he wants.

On the side of no fault for the county engineer is the obviously good job he has done in planning county road projects and in stretching local funds as far as they will go with the help of state and federal dollars. Nuernberger is better organized and more systematic than his predecessors, attested to by the more than $4 million in federal and state aid that has poured into county road coffers duing his time in office.

Whereas past administrations have had to turn back funds for which they were not prepared to qualify, Nuernberger has obtained unused allocations from other counties that have found themselves unprepared. In terms of actual road works completed and in the works, Nuernberger's record compared to the past is an enviable one.

If the county engineer really wants a better understanding of his program on the part of the county board, he might examine his own style of approach. We cannot remember him as one who sought to explain things nearly so much as he sought to insist upon them.

He is unrealistic at this time in thinking he should have an annual guaranteed mill levy for county road purposes. It would be nice if he could get it, but that just isn't the way things are done.

Nuernberger cannot be faulted for the job he has done. That job may be the best in county history. But if he wants improved county appropriations, he should expect to work with the county board rather than trying to direct it.

Reading Anatoly's mind

William Safire

Washington — Here am I, Anatoly Fedorovich Dobrynin, for 15 years the Soviet ambassador in Washington, destined to return to Moscow next year in a blaze of glory.

I can hardly believe my country's good fortune. Of course, as my wife Irina always reminds Gromyko, I had a lot to do with it. When the new American president adopted the right wing position on human rights, I told Moscow to "hang tough;" as I predicted, he tired of it quickly. When Mr. Carter made his hard-line disarmament proposal last spring, I knew that if we just refusd to consider it seriously, he would come back on our terms. And he has.

But Mr. Carter's promise to the Democratic fund raisers that he would have a SALT agreement "in a few weeks" — that I cannot claim credit for. Pure good fortune. Now, the American negotiators have a self-imposed deadline, and the pressure for more consessions is on them.

Not that we need any more SALT concessions. We will make a big show of arguing about the number of missiles and bombers, and then settle on 2,200, but that is not the point. We have already achieved in three months what I could not get in the past six years: an agreement to let the Soviet Union improve its missiles, without the Americans knowing our technology, until we can knock out their ability to retaliate after a first strike.

Not only that, but we will not accept limitations on our new Backfire bomber, while we get significant limitations on the American's cruise missle. The best of both worlds. By our patience and firmness — and thanks to the naivete of the new president — the Soviet Union will soon be the most powerful nation in the world.

In Europe, too, we have the Americans on the run. Here is an intelligence report from our people in London: On Sept. 15, there was a White House meeting on mutual force reduction with Brzezinski, Defense Secretary Brown (what a nice man!), Stanley Resor, David McGifford, and the rest of the group that used to call itself the verification panel.

According to what the Americans have told the British and the West Germans, Mr. Carter is prepared to support a marvelous concession so that Americans can withdraw from the defense of Europe. Instead of insisting that the Soviet Union reduce its forces by 1,700 modern tanks and 68,000 front-line troops, the Americans will propose that we move back ANY 1,500 tanks and ANY 68,000 troops.

That's a very different deal. Instead of reducing our real standing-start threat, we could pull some cooks and bakers a few miles back, along with some rusty rear-guard tanks — and in return, watch 29,000 U.S. combat troops and their tactical nuclear weapons pull back across an ocean.

I cannot believe the rest of the report: that if we do not go along with these concessions, the Americans are ready to suggest that they agree not to deploy their neutron bomb. Too good to be true. On top of the limitations the Americans are willing to take on their cruise missile as a theater weapon, that would amount to making Western Europe into a Soviet sphere of influence. Why are the Americans suddenly caving in on every front? If Henry were still there, I would suspect a trick. Maybe the Carter people are counting on the Jackson faction to stop them.

Anatoly Dobrynin
"... I did my share"

I must be on guard. We have been assured that the human rights issue will no longer be pressed, and the sending of former-everything Arthur Goldberg to the Belgrade conference is proof of that. But George Meany has just invited Sakharov and some other dissidents to visit the U.S., following the visit here of our trade unionist comrades.

That could be an attempt to embarrass us. If we refuse to let the dissidents come, It woulk be a big story to the Jackson faction. I will have to get Mr. Vance — another nice man — to disassociate the U.S. from that provocation.

Otherwise, all goes smoothly for my return in triumph. As Comrade Brezhnev promised, he has made Vasily Kuznetsov the first deputy chairman of the Presidium, which opens up the job of first deputy foreign minister for me.

Who would take my place here in Washington? Georgi Arbatov is an academic, and Oleg Troyonovsky at the U.N. doesn't know the American nuances. Georgi Korinienko has been following in my footsteps for years, and he is only 52 and a deputy foreign minister — he is the logical choice. Viktor Komplektov has been waiting for him to come here, so he could run the American Department, the same way as I have been waiting for Kuznetsov's job. Which reminds me, I should call Mondale.

The year I came to Washington, I had to suffer the humiliation of the Cuban missile crisis. Next fall, as I pick mushrooms outside Moscow, the Soviet Union will be "No. 1" in power. I did my share to bring that change about; Mr. Carter is doing more than his share.

I must tell Irina to pick up a couple of fur hats in Bloomingdale's, and a pair of mittens at Neiman-Marcus. I seem to remember, back home, it gets pretty cold in the winter.

Concern for beauty essential

We're surprised at City Councilman Joe Hampton's criticism of proposed regulations regarding the screening and surfacing of parking lots.

Hampton has been one of the city's better private developers and generally has a right to be proud of the visual impact of those housing or commercial developments for which he has been responsible. Those developments, we thought, reflected a respect for the city and an interest in the quality of life therein.

Perhaps the councilman has developed a new philosophy in assailing the proposed parking lot standards. The standards consolidate requirements into one law and provide that parking lots be screened from the eye and ear by the use of plantings, fences or earthen banks. The rules require lots to be surfaced with asphalt or concrete. The new standards are the result of three years of work and compromise among varying city interests.

"I think people are getting tired of all this regulation and red tape," Hampton said Monday.

That statement was somewhat strange in light of the fact that the proposed standards have been worked out over a long period of time, are not necessarily more stringent than those which have sometimes been required on an individual special permit basis in the past, and that no objections were raised to them — other than Hampton's — at Monday's meeting.

It has become fashionable in some circles to assail every action of government, no matter how reasonable, as being overregulation or "red tape." Other people understandably are getting tired of hearing the same phony label being applied again and again to goodwill efforts to make a city a better place in which to live.

If society wishes to turn its communities into vast stretches of roadways and compounds for the conveyance and storage of vehicles, it ought to at least do so with some taste and respect for aesthetics in mind.

In Lincoln, city government, citizen advisors and other private interests have cooperated in proposing uniform rules to beautify ugly parking lots.

That does not amount to overregulation by any reasonable standard.

'Here, Let's Add This Active Ingredient'

Russell Baker

New York — The German and Japanese terrorists who figure so prominently in current hijacking news are more exasperating than most terrorists because they seem to have no sensible political goals.

Many persons may not approve of the Irish terrorists, the Palestinian terrorists or the South American urban terrorists, but knowing that they have fairly clear political programs makes them seem less terrifying than the German and Japanese variety. Not many people like terrorism, of course, but most of us are able to view it philosophically so long as the terror seems to have a rational basis.

In the United States, for example, the most pervasive instrument of terror is the Internal Revenue Service with its immense powers to forage in our most private affairs, seize our property and harass the individual both physically and financially. Yet the reasons for its terrorism — the necessity of government to exact revenue from an increasingly truculent population — is so clearly understood that most people probably do not even think of IRS as a terrorist arm of the government.

Millions of Americans probably wonder at one time or the other whether Internal Revenue will "get" them or "catch up with" them sooner or later, no matter how much income they have turned over to the government, just as every nocturnal city stroller must wonder if the muggers will "get" him this time out. In the meantime, we go along. There is sense behind the terrorism of IRS. It is part of the social process, as is, in a perverse way, the existence of the mugger.

With the German and Japanese terrorists, by contrast, we are not only baffled, but also outraged. Why? Because they are impractical. What in the world do they want?

Terrifying everybody, shooting people and blowing things up are certainly uncivilized things to do, mind you, and it's terrible that such things are done, but they always have been done and, unpleasant though they have been, they have at least had some rational purpose. They may have been brutal, but they were at least practical.

Like the Symbionese Liberation Army, the Japanese and German terror groups seem to have no goal more profound than disturbing the peace. At times they seem simply to be lost in a romance of outlawry. There is a good bit of talk about world revolution, of course, but this doesn't seem to be thought out very well. By outraging the putatively revolutionary masses with random acts of violence, their activities promote a political climate conducive to more police, more state authoritarianism and more suppression of civil liberty.

In Germany and Japan the terrorists seem to be mostly children of the middle class.

This is not suprising. Revolutions are usually made by middle-class intellectuals able to exploit mass grievances. Germany and Japan, however, are scarcely conglomerations of mass grievance. With the United States, they are the most prosperous societies in the world. Prosperous countries are conservative countries for the obvious reason that people who are well off are unlikely to yearn for radical change in a system that gives them prosperity. For this reason, terrorism aimed at starting world revolution in Germany or Japan seems peculiarly irrational.

Originating in Britain or Italy, it might make somewhat more sense, but coming out of Germany and Japan, revolutionary terrorism seems to have no root in political reality, but to be only an aberrational political nonsense. The irrational in politics may be comic or scary. When expressing itself in bombing, kidnapping and murder, it is terrifying. And we send for the police. More and more of them.

Police can be fine. In excessive numbers among populations peculiarly fearful of their safety, they may also become the police state. We have watched the process in South Africa, which slid a little further toward the dark last week when the police came in the night for newspaper editors who irritated the government.

Not surprisingly, that act of terrorism was understandable to many Americans who, though possibly finding it repugnant, could perceive that terrorism of this sort, already a commonplace in China, the Soviet Union, Chile, Korea and other countries with which we comfortably abide, at least has clear political purposes and is, therefore, practical.

Cancer attack may be misdirected

Jack Anderson

Washington — The National Cancer Institute, which is waging the war on mankind's most dreaded disease, may be leading the charge in the wrong direction.

Although most cancer is caused by substances in the environment, less than one-fifth of the institute's $819-million budget is devoted to cancer prevention. Congressional investigators have concluded, therefore, that the giant institute is spending too much of its money looking for exotic cures.

For example, the institute has spent nearly $25 million on a program to develop "safer" cigarettes. "One might ask for an explanation in view of the unanimous opinion that smoking is related to cancer," declares a confidential House memo prepared for Rep. Andrew Maguire, D-N.J. "Shouldn't this cost be borne by the tobacco industry?"

The head of the safe cigarette program, Dr. Gio Gori, agreed that "any cigarette is hazardous . . . Our efforts to develop cigarettes with less tar and nicotine may help the tobacco industry, but it will benefit the country's 55 million smokers more." He added that the institute is trying to develop drugs to help people stop smoking altogether.

Meanwhile, the institute has not yet tested most of the 1,900 chemicals suspected of causing cancer. It has completed only 13 of 400 scheduled tests and is still working on such substances as cholesterol, castor oil, Tris, saccharin, gum arabic, cosmetics, acetic acid, pesticides and various food colorings.

"We've been caught with our pants down," an institute spokesman confessed. "It takes time to test these new substances. We're trying to catch up on the backlog," he explained.

At the same time, the House memo states, "Environmental research has been looked upon as second-class research," and most private research funded by the institute has not focused on the environmental causes of cancer.

The estimated costs of regulating chemical hazards, the memo adds, "are largely based on information from the industry to be regulated." Corporations once complained, for instance, that it would cost $65 million and 1.6 million jobs to reduce their use of cancer-causing vinyl chloride, but they have since adjusted at very little cost and few reductions in jobs.

Nobel Prize winner James Watson, who advised the institute for two years, called its war on cancer a "total sham" that consists mostly of "political logrolling."

The House investigations subcommittee may ask the institute to issue annual reports describing what action needs to be taken against cancer-causing substances. The institute, however, is expected to refuse. The subcommittee plans to hold hearings soon on the institute's shortcomings.

Boycott brouhaha: The Commerce Department appears to be seeking a way for American companies to boycott Israel—supposedly a violation of U.S. law.

Last year, congress barred businesses from complying with the Arab boycott of Israel and asked Commerce officials to draft regulations to put the law into effect. But congressional sources complain that the regulations contain loopholes large enough to drive an oil tanker through.

The sources say the language of at least half a dozen exemptions would enable companies to go along with the boycott without fear of prosecution. The House consumer and monetary affairs subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., will hold hearings this week on the issue.

Surprisingly, commerce official Stanley Marcus, who helped formulate the loophole-ridden regulations, has already briefed Arab and Israeli leaders on them. Now that the Mideast leaders have been briefed, our sources maintain, it will be difficult to change the draft regulations.

Marcus insisted, however, that he told the Arabs and Israelis the rules were not yet final. He contended the language will carry out the "full intent" of Congress in halting the Arab boycott.

Loan laxity: The Economic Development Administration is supposed to fight unemployment by giving loans to companies that can't get other financing. Yet the EDA has granted a $1 million loan to a firm owned by a billion-dollar foreign corporation, according to a confidential report by the General Accounting Office.

The report, labeled "restricted," blasts the EDA for approving the loan to Keystone Georgia Metal Co. for an aluminum recycling plant. Keystone's foreign ownership was disclosed on its loan application. But agency officials did not even consider whether its overseas owner could finance the project, the report charges.

The study, requested by Rep. John Moss, D-Cal., also said that EDA failed to question, as required by law, whether the loan would hurt existing companies. The investigators insist that there wasn't enough need for the recycling plant to justify the loan in the first place.

Oil industry victorious; offshore bill is scuttled

(c) New York Times

Washington — In a surprising victory for the oil industry, the House Rules Committee on Tuesday scuttled a bill designed to provide more orderly development of offshore oil and natural gas reserves.

The bill had been passed overwhelmingly by the Senate earlier this year, and supporters of the measure, largely liberal Democrats, had thought House passage secure.

But under intense lobbying pressure from the oil industry, which contends that the measure would slow development of offshore energy, the Rules Committee voted 10 to 5 Tuesday to postpone until next year consideration of the measure. Congressional sources said the vote suggested that the bill might not come up again.

The vote took a number of congressional observers by surprise, but one key House staff member said the lobbying pressure had been growing and that last week it had become apparent that the measure would have trouble.

In addition to the support of the Carter administration, the outer continental shelf bill had the support of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and of various consumer and environmental groups.

In a related energy development, the Senate Tuesday began consideration of the energy tax bill, the last segment of President Carter's energy program awaiting passage. However, the bill taken up Tuesday contains a vast array of tax credits, projected to cost $40 billion between now and 1985, in lieu of the taxes sought by the president.

The mood was lethargic and little of substance was accomplished, although liberals opposed to the bill again contended that the bill would be a "giveaway" for the industry and would substantially enlarge the budget deficit.

The House's outer continental shelf bill, which was developed by a special ad hoc committee, was weaker than the version approved, 60 to 18, by the Senate July 15.

However, it mandated development of a five-year leasing plan for undeveloped outer continental shelf reserves, closer supervision of companies carrying out development of the lease, use of alternative bidding systems to encourage wider participation, and allocation of responsibility for pollution.

The chief addition in the Senate version was authorization for the federal government to conduct preliminary exploration work.

"The bottling up of the OCS bill is an act of piracy, an unconscionable power play by the oil industry to prevent urgently needed reforms of the federal oil and gas leasing system," said James Flug, director of Energy Action, a consumer group.

Industry lobbyists, although acknowledging that the OCS bill was second only to the Carter energy program in importance to them, tried to downplay their role in Tuesday's vote.

"We've played a very minor role," said W. H. Moore, chairman of the National Ocean Industries Association, a local lobbying group. "We're just trying to point out to members of Congress that the OCS bill does hurt the little companies."

Among the "little companies," Moore included the Offshore Co., a Houston-based drilling contractor of which he is vice chairman. Last year, that company had revenues of $188 million.

Congressional observers have also noted heavy lobbying by the American Petroleum Institute, and by such major companies, as Texaco, Mobil, Standard Oil of California and Exxon.

The focus of the lobbying has largely been several of the five Democrats who sided with all five Republicans in forcing a postponement of the bill.

The administration has also tried to lobby, and in recent days the president has reportedly made calls to wavering senators. Consumer lobbyists said that two key votes lost Tuesday belonged to two Democrats, B.F. Sisk of California and Morgan F. Murphy of Illinois.

However, some private lobbyists and congressional staff members suggested that the administration's effort, mostly coordinated by the Interior Department, had been "too little, too late."

Meanwhile at the Senate, the energy tax bill, which is supported by the administration, faces an uncertain fate at the hands of both liberals and conservatives.

With administration backing, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Finance Committee, is trying to get a skelton bill containing only tax credits through the Senate in the hope that taxes sought by the president would be added during the subsequent conference with the House.

But Tuesday, the Senate Budget Committee agreed unanimously to object to the bill on the ground that as now written it would exceed the budget ceiling for the current fiscal year by about $800 million. However, Long contended that the Treasury secretary could postpone the credits if revenues were not forthcoming to pay for them.

Profit levels said stalled

New York (AP) — Like the economy in general, profit levels for U.S. corporations appear to have stalled in the third quarter, economists say.

Third quarter reports from hundreds of companies that have come out in recent weeks suggest improved profit levels compared with a year ago. But several economists say they expect little change from profit levels reached in the last quarter.

Overall business profits, after taxes, reached $97.2 billion in the first quarter and grew to $104.3 billion by the second, but the third quarter results are expected to show little change from that level, according to a number of economists.

Bob Lewis of Citibank projects corporate profits in the $103 billion to $105 billion range, when earnings reports for the third quarter are completed.

Citibank's analysis of more than 500 corporate earnings reports so far suggests they are running 15 per cent above profit levels in the third quarter of 1976, or about the same level as the year-to-year comparison in the second quarter, said Lewis.

But many of the largest corporations have not yet issued their earnings. When results are all in, Lewis says, the year-to-year third quarter results may show overall profits somewhat weaker, in the 10% to 15% range.

The flattening in profit growth, says Lewis, "is mainly due to the slow economic growth, real growth in the economy slowed to 3.8% at an annual rate in the third quarter. Profits are very responsive to changes in volume."

Dimitris Balatsos, vice president and economist at Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., sees much the same situation.

"A lot of the froth has been blown off from corporate profits. Judging from the preliminary numbers, profits have flattened out in the third quarter," he said.

Earnings reports so far suggest a decidedly mixed pattern in such industries as oil, chemicals and banking while too few reports are in from consumer-oriented sectors as retail chains and automotive concerns to note a pattern.

Reports from steel industry companies showed, as expected, profit losses which the companies said were due to some strike-related problems, competition from imports, and reduced production.

U.S. Steel, the industry leader, reported a 75.6% decline in net earnings for the quarter. National Steel, the third largest producer, said its profits fell 46%; earnings at Republic Steel Corp. were off 47%, and Armco Steel reported an earnings drop of about 8%.

The chemical industry showed a sharp earnings mix. While the Du Pont Co., the nation's largest chemical company, reported a 41% increase in third quarter profits, Dow Chemical Co., second largest, reported a 13.9% decline. Monsanto Corp., which took a large writeoff on its plastic bottling operations, reported a 61% profit loss. Among others, Celanese Corp. was up 61% and Allied Chemicals was 3% better than profit levels in the third quarter of 1976.

Exxon Corp., the nation's largest corporation, cited declining chemical sales as one factor in its flat earnings for the quarter. It reported that earnings of $635 million were unchanged from the 1976 period. Profits from the chemical divisions were down 10% while earnings from oil and natural gas operations increased 3%.

Other oil industry companies did better. Occidental Petroleum, reported third quarter profits up about 57%; Standard Oil of Indiana, up 8%; and Phillips Petroleum Co., up 25%, and Shell Oil Co., 2% higher.

Reports issued so far suggest fairly consistent improvement in data processing and business machines companies and, because of demand of the housing market, improvement in building supply corporations.

International Business Machines, which is among the 10 largest corporations in America, said record sales of data processing equipment helped boost its earnings 17.6% in the quarter. Among others in the industry group were Burroughs Corp., up 16%; Control Data Corp., up 7%; and Xerox Corp., up 10%.

Senate bill would lift dollar limits on disaster payments to farmers

Washington (UPI) — The Senate gave final approval Tuesday to legislation that will remove dollar limitations on disaster payments to farmers for this year's crops of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton and rice.

The bill was passed 61-26 and sent to the white house despite warnings from Sens. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., it would break the congressional budget.

Muskie and Bellmon, respectively the chairman and ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee, said the measure would add $29 million to the already large pricetag on federal farm programs.

Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., said the new farm law, passed this year, will remove payment limitations under the disaster programs for wheat, feed grains, cotton and rice starting with next year's crops. He said the same philosophy should be applied to this year's crops as well.

"It is unfair to limit the amount of disaster payments a particular farmer could receive," Talmadge said.

He said financial losses can be "devastating" and the limitation of payments to a large farmer "could result in the loss of the farm."

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said applying the same philosophy for this year's crops as will go into law next year was important for "equity."

But Bellmon said the measure was not going to benefit small farmers and would only help a few large operators.

"When we do this, we're doing more than just spending $29 million. We are eroding the effectiveness of the budget process . . . and in this case, we're doing it for the benefit of only a few individuals."

Muskie said the cost of federal farm programs has soared and the increases must stop.

He said the bill would allow about 4,000 of the nation's largest farmers to receive "grants of up to $29 million that don't have to be repaid."

Both Sens. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., and Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., voted for the bill.

RCA reports income rise

New York (AP) — RCA Corp. reported that third quarter net income rose to $62.9 million, or 82 cents per share, from $33.4 million, or 43 cents per share, a year ago.

Revenue was $1.46 billion, compared with $1.33 billion in 1976.

Hubert has Senate in his hand

Washington (UPI) — They hugged him and kissed him, they cried and applauded like fools, and then they simply turned the Senate over to Hubert Horatio Humphrey Tuesday in a wild, roaring love feast of a welcome home.

Eyes glistening with tears, Humphrey returned to the Senate after two months of battling inoperable pelvic cancer. For 30 minutes, he held the place and everyone in it in the palm of his hand.

"Most of you know me as a sentimental man, and that I am," he told his colleagues and jam-packed Senate galleries in quavering voice, after the bedlam had ceased and a hush had fallen.

"Today is a very special day in my life. The greatest gift in life is the gift of friendship and I have received it, and the greatest healer there is the friendship of love."

He quoted his doctor in Minnesota as telling him, "Hubert, we've done about as much for you as we can do. Why don't you go back to Washington where you want to be, where you can be with your friends."

"I said, 'Doctor, that's good advice'."

When he was done with an impromptu speech peppered with tension-easing jokes and inspirational calls — "come, let us reason together" — Hubert Humphrey took one more deafening ovation, gave the Senate back to the senators, participated in his first vote, on a bill to raise wheat crop disaster payments to farmers, and came up on the winning side.

He will remember it all, though, as a day in which men and women embraced him, strangers cheered him in the corridors, dignified Robert Byrd hugged him, Republicans paid him tribute, and a youngster left him a misspelled get-well note reading, "You are vary, vary nice. I love you."

And the day on which, for one electrifying moment, he stood alone a step or two inside a Senate entrance, arms raised high, while the place exploded into its welcome.

Earlier, during tearful reunions with his staffers at his Senate office, Humphrey also vowed he is going "to win this fight" against cancer and swing into the job of helping Jimmy Carter get things done in Congress.

"That's why I'm back," he said. "I want nothing. I can give a lot."

Looking gaunt now, the familiar cherubic face wreathed sparsely in silvery hair, Humphrey, 66, returned from his long medical absence dispensing cherry jokes and greetings like the happy warrior of old when he arrived by limousine at his Senate office.

Getting out of his limousine, he feigned astonishment at the crowd of reporters and photographers awaiting him, pretended to hide his face in embarrassment, and quipped, "I'm not Jimmy Carter, I'm Hubert Humphrey!"

Then: "Where were you in 1968?" when he lost the presidential race to Richard Nixon.

Inside, moving through hugging and kissing sprees to a welcome-back party thrown by his staffers, Humphrey tried to perk up morale with quips on his own condition.

"You notice my hair is a little curly?" he cracked to a staff member. "It's a tough way to get curly hair."

But his voice seemed to crack with emotion when he said, "doctors can help. But they tell me I've got to win this fight. I believe that I can win it, and that's why I'm back."

He also said Carter "needs a friend" in the Senate on energy issues and the Panama Canal treaties debate, and he means to be that friend, helping to get legislation "back on track."

Riding to the Senate on the underground subway system, the senator and his wife Muriel drew more cheers from crowds of tourists and congressional workers.

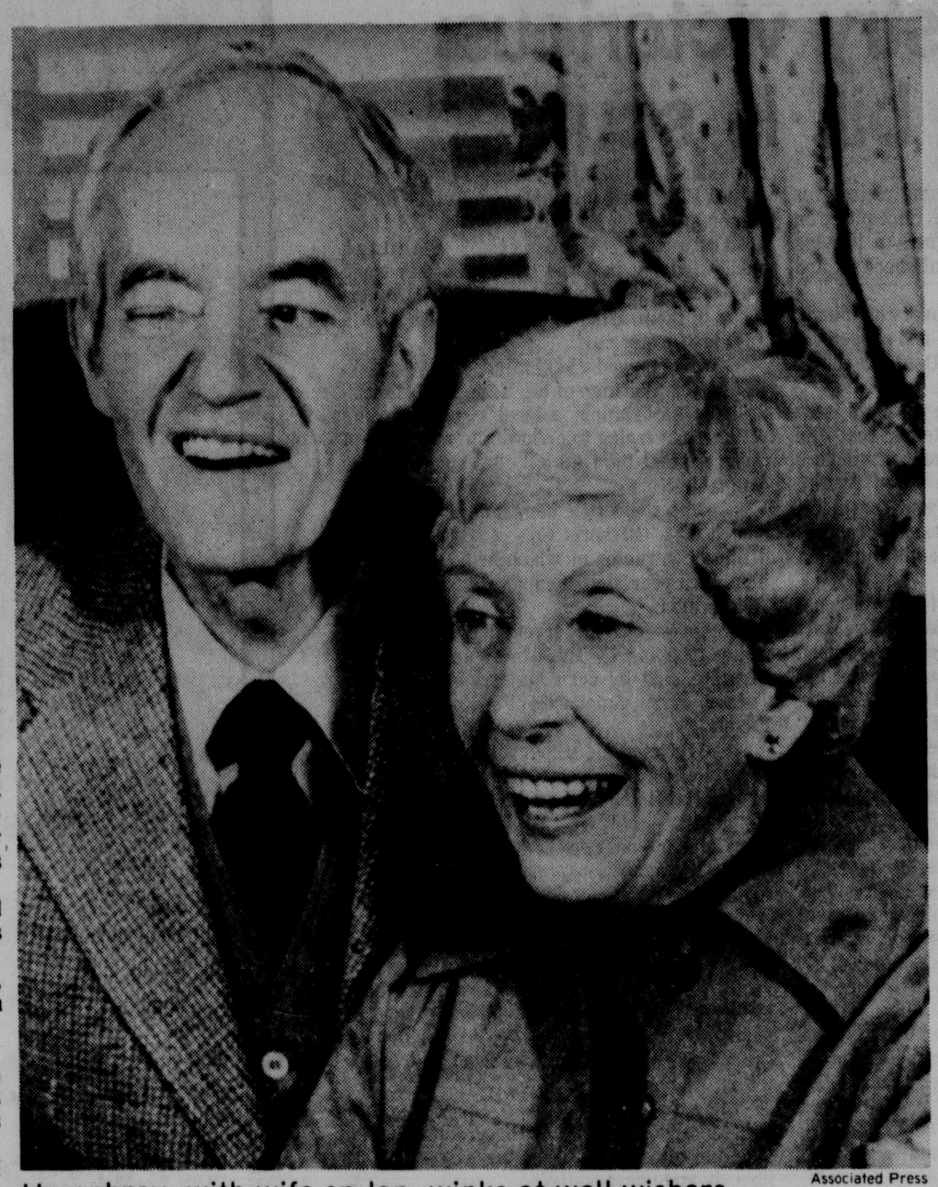
Then, entering the chamber at 2 p.m., he walked into an ovation that lasted eight solid minutes, and a round of hand-pumping and embraces. Virtually every colleague, Republican and Democrat, was on hand.

They leaped to their feet as he entered through a side door. The packed galleries rose in unison.

Byrd, the Senate Democratic leader, welcomed him back with a formal speech calling him "a many born man."

And Howard Baker, the Republican leader, capped it all off by suggesting it was time Humphrey said a few words himself, and adding:

"I look at Hubert Humphrey and I wonder what on earth he'll be up to next."



Humphrey, with wife on lap, winks at well-wishers. Associated Press

Iowa House caught by coffee hike

Des Moines, Iowa (AP) — Members of the Iowa House of Representatives and their visitors will be paying next January for the higher price of coffee.

Legislators and their guests in theory have been paying for coffee by putting coins in a cigar box near a large coffee urn at the back of the House chamber.

The House Administration Committee found, however, that the "kitty" fell $300 short of the $1,500 needed to supply coffee to representatives, their secretaries, lobbyists and reporters this year.

So it recommended that a vending machine be installed before the legislature convenes next year.

Rep. Carroll Perkins, D-Jefferson, who fought unsuccessfully to retain the old "honor" system, vowed to bring his own coffee maker to compete with the vending machine.

"Coffee is just part of the American thing," he said.

Japan's budget OKd

Tokyo (AP) — Japan's parliament passed a supplementary budget of about $1.06 billion for fiscal 1977 to stimulate the sluggish economy.

The additional spending comes on top of the regular $97 billion budget for the fiscal year ending next March 31.

21 bodies from Vietnam identified

Washington (AP) — The Pentagon on Tuesday identified 20 U.S. Air Force and Navy fliers and one U.S. civilian whose remains were turned over to the United States by the Vietnamese government nearly a month ago.

One body still has not been identified at the U.S. Military Center in Honolulu where experts have been working since after the remains were picked up in Hanoi by a U.S. delegation on Sept. 30.

Defense records show that 702 military personnel are still listed as missing in the Southeast Asia war, with 1,803 carried on the books as presumed dead but whose bodies have never been recovered.

The newly returned remains include 17 Air Force officers, three Navy lieutenants and a civilian, Tucker Gougelman of Montclair, N.J.

Defense officials said they could not give any information on Gougelman's background but there have been reports that he worked for the Central Intelligence Agency.

The newly repatriated remains were those of men who vanished on missions dating as far back as March 1966, nearly 12 years ago.

A U.S. Air Force transport plane will bring the remains on Travis Air Force Base, Calif., on Wednesday. They will be sent to the U.S. Army Mortuary at Oakland, Calif. and then, officials said, turned over to their families or buried by the government as directed by their survivors.

Following the names of men whose remains were identified:

Navy Lt. Walter O. Estes II, Williamston, Mich.
Navy Lt. James E. Teague, Jonesboro, Ark.
Navy Lt. Richard C. Thum, Cleveland, Ohio.

Emergency call number

I am new in town and wonder if, just in case, there is a 24-hour service for pets. In many cities veterinarians team up to provide this service. How about Lincoln?

J. R.
Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Emergency veterinary service is provided on a 24-hour call basis by several Lincoln veterinarians. The service is intended for use by persons who do not have a veterinarian or are unable to reach their regular pet doctor. The number, listed in the yellow pages, is 435-7060. Emergency fees should be paid at the time services are rendered.

Has reservations about bill

I recently flew to New York state on a business trip. I had made a reservation at the local Howard Johnson's Motor Inn through United Airlines before I left. When I arrived, however, I called the inn and was told they had no room for me. I subsequently took another room at another hotel. After I returned home, I received a bill from Howard Johnson's listing me as a no-show. Needless to say, I don't think I should have to pay for the inconvenience they caused me. Can you help?

J. W.
Lincoln

ACTION LINE: We contacted Howard Johnson's about difficulties but the company was not able to find out why your reservation was not found. Their representative promised to check their records and get back to us with an explanation. We'll keep you posted.

Cross about missing cross

On July 9, I ordered a magenta cross necklace from American Consumer, Inc. in Philadelphia. A few weeks later I received a card saying the item was backordered. I wrote to them in August and September but still have not received my order. Can you get my order?

L. M.
Friend

ACTION LINE: American Consumer reports your cross is still backordered and apologized for the delay. According to the card you received in August, you could have elected to wait for the necklace or to seek a refund. Because you did not return the card, the firm assumed you chose to wait for the item. If you cannot wait, simply send them the card we have returned to you and your total purchase price will be refunded.

Winter recreation plans?

ACTION LINE TIP: With snow flurries beginning to fly, some folks are already beginning winter vacation plans. Buffalo share home with llamas, plane

Athena, Ore. (AP) — Show me a home where the buffalo roam and I'll show you a herd of llama, two mules and an antique airplane, too.

Barrett and Andy Tillman keep them all on a 1,000-acre wheat spread in northeastern Oregon they run with their father, John.

Barrett, 28, trained as a journalist, spends some of his time writing books on Navy warplanes of World War II and serving on the Umatilla County Planning Commission.

Andy, 25, a smallish fellow with a wild mop of blond hair and a drooping moustache, handles the llama and buffalo. He spent his college days studying poetry and literature and smiles politely if a visitor says something like, "Mary had a little llama."

"I guess that qualifies me to raise llamas and buffalo," he says with an impish grin as he heaves pine boughs over a fence where 25 female llamas and their babies munch on needles and twigs.

"Actually, our dad gave us two buffalo when I was 12. Then he had a string of mules as well as 5,000 cattle. So we've been around dangerous animals all our lives."

The llamas, woolly, long-necked cousins of the camel, native to the Peruvian Andes, scarcely qualify for that designation. "I guess I would just call them curious," Andy says.

Andy has been studying Quechua, the Indian language of Peru and is headed there to bone up on llama raising.

He intends to sell the animals for pets and pack animals. A number of llamas already are treading mountain trails in the Northwest.

Llama wool, too, is in demand, and Andy carts shearings to a mill in Pendleton 20 miles to the south where the soft, multicolored hair is turned into yarn.

Barrett, meantime, is working on the third in a series of books on development and combat use of old propeller-driven Navy airplanes.

"Everybody had written books on Air Force planes, so I thought it was time somebody wrote about Navy airplanes," says Barrett, a lightly built, dark haired man given to floppy hats and dark, aviator-style sun glasses.

The Dauntless, a two-place, single-engine dive bomber, was the hero of the battle of Midway during World War II, and Barrett had one of the machines for a while. It's now in the Marine Corps Museum at Quantico, Va.

"I wanted a Dauntless because that's what dad flew in the Marine Corps. We got that one from the City of Portland who used it for a spray plane. But it was like having a St. Bernard puppy — eventually you come to the realization that you have to feed it. It took 35 gallons an hour."

Now a stark yellow N3N biplane trainer graces the Tillmans' private airstrip. At one end of the 1,700-foot sod strip is a metal hangar where the plane is kept along with engines, propellers and other paraphernalia from old aircraft.

"That's trading stock," says John Tillman, a pilot for 40 years.

In the rear of a hangar, a collection of old Navy bunks hangs from a bulkhead — Navy talk for a wall. The bunk room houses old-airplane buffs who drop in for a day or so to swap parts, gear and tales.

And outside, a rotating beacon, a relic from the days when mail planes navigated by flying from light to light, is going up. "Well, we just figured an airport out to have a beacon," Barrett says.

Declining enrollments shrink numbers in elementary classes

By Nancy Hicks
Staf Staff Writer

The number of small classes within the Lincoln schools rose this year, according to information presented to the Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday night.

As total enrollment has declined, the classes, particularly at the elementary level, have tended to get smaller, said Superintendent John Prasch.

This year 69% of the kindergarten classes, 84% of the primary and 80% of the intermediate classes taught by single teachers have less than 25 students.

In schools where team teaching is used, 83% of the classes averaged less than 25 students per teacher, according to the statistics.

At the junior high level smaller classes (less than 25 students) are generally found in foreign languages, home economics, industrial education, English, science, journalism and creative writing.

Smaller classes at the senior high level are generally found in art, foreign language, home economics, industrial education, speech and journalism.

While research does not prove that smaller classes are better, teachers contend that there is "a big difference between 31 students and 26 students," said Prasch. "And the difference is larger than just six kids."

The class with 26 to 30 students "is where we'd like to be," said Prasch. The smaller classes are more costly, he said.

And the movement to smaller classes may mean a closer look at new programs in future years. "We're going to have to take a look at the smaller classes and see if we can afford to add these new programs," said Stan Linnertz, board member.

The board postponed action on a request to divide the current Cheney School District among four neighboring districts — Lincoln, Waverly, Norris and Palmyra.

Instead, the board discussed a broad policy statement which maintains that the board will be neutral in these dissolution questions.

The policy, to be voted on at the Nov. 8 meeting, says that the district will acquire territory as the Lincoln boundaries move outward and will accept other territory in the path of metropolitan expansion which is brought in by a lawful process.

If the board accepts this general policy, it is likely that members will then accept the Cheney dissolution petition. This will allow the dissolution process to continue and final dividing of the district would not take place unless 60% of the Cheney voters had signatures on that petition.

"This should be decided by the Cheney folks," said Prasch, and a yes vote to accept the current petition would allow the process to continue.

The actual division will not be a financial benefit to Lincoln, Prasch pointed out.

If the district is divided as currently proposed, the 18 Cheney elementary students would probably be transported to Pyrtle school, 6½ miles from their current elementary school, Prasch said.

Board members also discussed the proposed remodeling of Clinton and Elliott schools, each expected to cost about $300,000.

New roofs, lowered accoustical ceilings, some carpeting and new windows are the major expenses in the two rennovation projects.

In addition, coat closets will be removed from most classrooms, cabinets installed and water outlets put in many classrooms.

Clinton remodeling will also include converting some classrooms into a larger media center. Elliott's request for a gym was labeled "out of the question" by administrators.

"We can't be adding (space) to these schools in these parts of town at this point," said Prasch.

In other action, the board agreed to put all school trampolines into storage.

The district has not been able to get liability insurance for the trampolines and had already stopped trampoline use in junior high gym classes.

The new policy will eliminate Lincoln gymnasts competition in the trampoline events. "It means we're going to forfeit that many points. And we won't be able to have a state champion," said Prasch.

The trampolines will be stored in the school warehouse until "we find out what is going to happen state and nationwide," said Prasch.

BB guns recalled

Washington (UPI) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission Tuesday announced the recall of BB guns which may have a defect that could cause them to fire even when the safety latch is on.

Involved are model 454 repeater pistols marketed by the Crosman Arms Co., a division of the Coleman Co. Inc. The agency said 25,000 of the guns were manufactured and distributed nationwide during 1977 "for recreational shooting" and a "portion" of those, otherwise unspecified, are defective.

The commission said "an improper dimension on a receiver cover raises the possibility of the pistol discharging when the trigger is pulled with the safety engaged."

Owners of the pistols are being asked to take them to the nearest authorized service center where repairs will be made.

"The pistols are identified as Crosman model 454, 26-shot, semi-automatic .777-caliber C02-powered BB pistols. Suspect pistols can be identified by the first three digits of the serial number. The digits are 477, 577, 677, 777 or 877. The serial number is located on the left side of the pistol just below the name Crosman," the agency said.

Sears recalls whirlpool baths

Chicago (UPI) — Sears, Roebuck and Co. announced Tuesday it is recalling some 2,100 hand and foot whirlpool baths sold since Sept. 15 which could give users an electrical shock.

The company said the manufacturer, Dazey Products Co. of Kansas City, Kan., discovered during routine testing a crack may develop in the plastic motor housing allowing water to make contact with the motor and give the user a shock.

Owners should check the date code on the plastic motor housing of the unit above the electrical cord exit. The affected units are identified by the following date codes: C97, D97, E97, C977, D977 or E977. The model number, located on a metal plate on the front of the motor housing, is 638.2262.

All other Sears compact and full-size whirlpool baths, including Model No. 638.2262 with different date codes than those listed above, are approved for sale and for operation.

Halloween play to benefit zoo

A Halloween play "Adventures in the Haunted Forest" will be presented in Lincoln and Waverly.

Lincolnites can see the musical Thursday through Sunday at 6, 7 and 8 p.m. at St. Paul's United Methodist Church, 12th and M Streets.

Matinees are scheduled in Waverly Saturday and Sunday at 2 and 3 p.m. in the Lancaster County Bank basement.

An admission charge of one dollar for adults and 50 cents for children will help raise funds for the Lincoln Children's Zoo.

Produced by Lincolnite Art Kuhr, the play is sponsored by the Waverly Arts Foundation.

Music concert slated Sunday

A concert of classical music featuring members of Mu Phi Epsilon, the national professional music fraternity, will be held 3 p.m. Sunday at the O'Donnell Auditorium on the Nebraska Wesleyan University campus.

An admission charge of one dollar will help raise funds to buy a grand piano for the Wesleyan Music Department.

Stewart pleads guilty to Atlanta stickup

Atlanta (UPI) — George David Stewart, whose release from the Fulton County jail was demanded by airline hijacker Thomas Michael Hannan last week, pleaded guilty Tuesday to the bank robbery charges brought against him and Hannan.

Stewart, 29, of Mobile, Ala., entered a guilty plea to a single count of armed robbery before U.S. District Judge Albert Henderson.

Sentencing was set for Dec. 5. Stewart faces a maximum prison sentence of 25 years and fines of $10,000.

Stewart and Hannan, 29, were accused of robbing the National Bank of Georgia's Northside Parkway branch in Atlanta last Sept. 2.

Hannan and Stewart had been scheduled to appear before Henderson last Friday but the hearing was postponed after Hannan shot himself to death aboard the hijacked Frontier Airlines jetliner on a runway at Hartsfield International Airport Thursday night.

The shotgun blast came after Hannan released 11 passengers and two stewardesses during radio negotiations with FBI agent Don Cochran and Atlanta lawyer J. Roger Thompson, who represented both men in the bank robbery case.

One of Hannan's demands was for the release of his close friend but Stewart asked Hannan to give himself up before the suicide.

Thompson said Stewart "made a real contribution" to the negotiations. "He did everything I asked him to." But Thompson would not comment on whether Stewart's cooperation would be used as the basis for a leniency plea.

Old West region income to stay low

Bismarck, N.D. (AP) — Despite an influx of energy industries in the five-state Old West region, whites who live there are not expected to catch up with the incomes of the Joneses in the other 45 states, a regional economist said Tuesday.

The average per capita income in the Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming and Nebraska is expected to remain at about 90% of the national average, according to Jeannette Studer, an Old West Regional Commission staff member from Billing, Mont.

She spoke at the opening business session of the Old West Conference on Balanced Growth.

She said there appeared to be a regional consensus that achieving a higher per capita income relative to the rest of the nation would damage the quality of life in the five states.

"We'd probably have massive industrialization, bringing in a lot of polluting industries," she said.

"We'd be seeing a lot of people come into the region," swelling cities and creating the attendant urban problems, she said.

Per capita incomes will have to reach about $4,800 in 1967 dollars for the region to stay at 90% of the expected national average of per capita income, according to a 1976 commission study.

Per capita income among Indians is much lower than that of whites, and is expected to remain so, according to the study, which sets a goal of closing the income gap between the two races by 1985.

Ms. Studer said the per capita income figures, when looked at in comparison with the figures from industrial states, might be misleading because of the self sufficiency of part of the region's agricultural economy.

However, she said, the commission had no way to determine how, for instance, farmers' raising their own food would affect an income estimate. "Those figures are hard to come by," she said.

The conference is expected to generate ideas to be presented at a White House conference next year.

About 200 government and private sector representatives began discussing ways to foster and guide economic growth Tuesday, and were to sift them Wednesday.

North Dakota Gov. Arthur A. Link exhorted the delegates to come up with "some unique and, yes, even some radical ideas."

"I believe we in the Old West are just maverick enough to come up with some new and unusual constructive ideas to forward to our nation's capital," he said in welcoming remarks.

Navy to review case of Auburn Marine

United Press International

A spokesman for Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., Tuesday night said the U.S. Navy and Defense Department have been ordered to intervene in the case of a Nebraska Marine who faces drug charges in Japan.

Don Shasteen, Curtis' administrative assistant, said the U.S. Marine Corps told Curtis late Tuesday of the decision to intervene in the case of Pfc. Richard Lynn Wilson, 19, Auburn.

The intervention was ordered by presidential counsel Robert Lipshutz, he said.

Shasteen said in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C., that the United States will ask the Japanese Ministry of Justice in Tokyo to waive jurisdiction in the case and let United States authorities handle prosecution under the U.S. military code of justice.

Wilson was scheduled to be returned to Okinawa Tuesday to face charges of bringing 700 grams of marijuana through the mails to Okinawa. But, Shasteen said earlier Tuesday that Wilson's return was delayed until President Carter could review the case.

Shasteen said Curtis called the intervention by United States officials "a significant development" in the case. He also quoted Curtis as saying he has tried to "get people at the highest level in our government to appeal to the Japanese government to waive jurisdiction in this incident."

Shasteen said Neil Danberg, Wilson's attorney, was in Washington to meet with Lipshutz to discuss the case. Wilson was indicted by the Japanese following an investigation by agents of the U.S. Naval Investigative Service.

On Monday, U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz refused to grant a temporary restraining order preventing the United States from returning Wilson to Okinawa for prosecution.

Schatz said there was nothing to indicate Wilson would not receive due process and a fair trial from the Japanese. The judge also said Wilson was in Japan at the time of the alleged offense and, under terms of a treaty, should be returned to face trial.

Board seeks counsel payment ruling

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

In a 2-1 decision, the Lancaster County Board Tuesday voted to seek a court declaration allowing it to pay legal counsel in a lawsuit against County Assessor Fritz Meyer.

Meyer has filed suit against the board for the way pay-raise funds are budgeted. Meyer claims the commissioners are handling cost-of-living raises illegally by putting the money in a special "salary adjustment" account instead of turning the money over to county department heads.

County Attorney Ron Lahners has issued the opinion that while commissioners may hire outside counsel to defend themselves in the suit, they have no authority to pay the counsel from county funds.

Lahners said he cannot act as defense counsel in the case because in an earlier opinion he stated that Meyer's position is correct.

The 2-1 division of the board is expected to continue throughout the case. Board Chairman Bruce Hamilton said he voted against the ressolution seeking a court ruling because he believes Meyer's position is valid.

A petition will be filed Wednesday in district court requesting a declaratory judgment authorizing the commissioners to hire an attorney "and pay a reasonable compensation."

If their request is denied, said Commissioner Jan Gauger, the commissioners will have to find other funds to pay the legal counsel which they already have hired — the firms of Perry, Perry, Witthoff and Guthrey, and Mattson, Ricketts, Davies, Stewart and Calkins.

In other action, the board set the fair market value of Westview, the former county rest home, at "something in excess of $60,000."

The board will seek sealed bids on the property, which has been vacant for more than a year, for sale within two months.

The property, consisting of 5.84 acres with a large institutional home and three smaller buildings, is zoned AA-rural. County Engineer Marv Nuernberger told the commissioners they should consider a change of zone before the sale.

"I don't think that's the highest and best use," he noted.

Chairman Bruce Hamilton said a study has shown it would cost $540,000 to bring the building up to health and safety standards for a nursing home.

The board referred to Nuernberger a request by the village of Cheney for reduced speed limit on a county road. Commissioner Bob Colin asked Nuernberger also to study the speed limit on Old Cheney Road between 70th and U.S. Hwy. 77; Colin said he has received numerous complaints that the limit is too high.

Kearney man is charged with burglaries

Kearney (AP) — Robert G. Smith, 20, of Kearney, has been charged with five burglaries and theft of a vehicle.

The complaints list alleged burglaries at five local business establishments and theft of pickup truck that was abandoned northwest of the city.

Police with a search warrant Saturday confiscated an estimated $2,000 worth of stolen merchandise allegedly taken from the business places. The goods were discovered in an empty house north of Kearney.

All the burglaries occurred in the last month.

Real estate censures announced

United Press International

The Nebraska Real Estate Commission Tuesday said it has censured Washington Heights Co. of Omaha and K. Stanton Clark for violating provisions of the commission's rules and regulations.

The censure order, signed by Secretary of State Allen Beermann, said Washington Heights holds a corporate real estate broker's license and Clark holds a real estate broker's license. Both licenses were issued by the commission, Beermann said.

According to the commission, both Washington Heights and Clark failed to list all of their trust accounts in Nov. 25, 1975, when they applied for their licenses. The commission said the defendants listed only one of five trust accounts held at the North Side Bank of Omaha.

In addition, the commission said the denendants opened four other trust accounts at North Side Bank and two at Omaha's First National Bank after filing the application. The commission said it was not informed about the new accounts, as is required by the commission's rules.

Further, the commission said the defendants claimed in their license renewal application, which was filed on Nov. 10, 1976, that "there has been no change in the trust account information previously supplied on the required form."

The commission declared that the defendant's statement was untrue and added that the defendants failed to notify the commission of the new accounts until March 22, 1977, when the notification was demanded by the commission.

The commission also said the defendants made "substantial misrepresentations and demonstrated unworthiness to act as a broker."

In addition, the commission said Clark violated the commissions' rules when he signed a form indicating his principal business was being a real estate broker, when in fact it was not.

Electronics technology pioneered

An electronics technology which could change the communications and solar energy fields is being tested and developed by four University of Nebraska-Lincoln researchers.

Prof. Rodney J. Soukup of the university's College of Engineering, graduate students Dan Mosher of Iowa City, Iowa, A.K. Kulkarni of India and undergraduate assistant David Still of Omaha are developing gallium arsendie crystals for use in electronics components.

Soukup said the gallim arsenide crystals would replace the silicon crystals now used in electronic components. He said the gallim arsenide crystals are able to handle a higher frequency range than the standard silicon crystals and could improve aircraft communications systems.

The drawback to gallim arsenide is its cost, Soukup said. The crystals are found only in minute amounts of iron ore and manufacturing processes are expensive.

"There are currently three methods of manufacturing gallium arsenide crystals," Soukup said. "But the best one devised so far is the most expensive."

Soukup and his staff are trying to develop a less expensive method of producing the crystals from a $100,000 grant from the U.S. Air Force.

JUST ADD LOVE! by ANN CROWLEY

NO TRICK IN THIS TREAT

This year I have just the thing for Halloween treats. It is golden molasses popcorn balls with raisins. This way I have the Halloween colors of orange and black in a single, hold-in-the-hand treat.

Besides meeting those criteria, my molasses raisin popcorn ball is very nutritious. The popcorn contains some protein and a little fat. However, it does supply minerals, the B vitamins and yellow popcorn is a good source of Vitamin A. Popcorn generally contains some iron, so by adding raisins and by making my syrup with molasses, I add more iron to the popcorn ball. Growing children do need a good supply of iron in their diet for the increasing volume of blood and the building of new body tissues.

I would like to share my recipe for golden molasses raisin popcorn balls - it's even fun making them.

For six cups of popped popcorn, melt:
1 tablespoon butter in sauce pan.
Add: ½ cup molasses and ¼ cup sugar.
Cover and bring to boil, cook for 3 minutes.
Add 1 cup raisins, cook uncovered until syrup forms hard crack stage - approximately 290° on the candy thermometer. Pour over popcorn and mix with a wooden spoon until popcorn is coated.
When cool enough to handle, coat hands with butter and shape popcorn into balls. When cool, wrap each in wax paper or saran wrap.

Power users say NPPD overcharges

Columbus (UPI) — Nebraska Public Power District municipal and wholesale customers contend they are being overcharged for power.

They alleged NPPD figures rates for the 230 towns served at retail pay less for their power than NPPD's 99 rural and municipal wholesale customers.

The arguments were raised during a public meeting requested by NPPD customers who questioned wholesale power rate increases for calendar 1978-79.

NPPD has tentatively proposed an increase of 13.6% but has indicated this may be lowered slightly when the NPPD board officially sets rates next month.

Challenging the rates NPPD charges the 230 towns it serves at retail were the League of Nebraska Municipalities; Nebraska Electric Generation and Transmission Cooperative which represents rural power districts; the Nebraska Municipal Power Pool, and the cities of Beatrice, North Platte, Holdrege and South Sioux City.

Dave Rumolo, a Greeley, Colo., consultant hired by the league, said a review of data furnished by NPPD showed the district treats its retail division differently than it does wholesale power customers when calculating minimum billings.

He said municipal customers seldom pay a minimum billing penalty, giving them a significant rate advantage over retail customers of the 99 utilities that buy wholesale electricity from NPPD.

H. Steve Wacker, Nebraska Municipal Power Pool general manager, said studies such as Romolo's indicate NPPD is not observing state law calling for electricity rates that are fair, reasonable and non-discriminatory.

He added he did not think NPPD deliberately tried to set rates so its retail division would have an advantage over its wholesale customers.

On another matter, several NPPD customers objected to paying more for their power during calendar 1978-79 because of a rate dispute between NPPD and the Lincoln Electric System.

NPPD this month notified customers that because of the dispute, which includes LES' refusal to pay part of its NPPD wholesale power bill, NPPD will have to borrow $40 million to pay operating expenses.

NPPD recently estimated the interest will amount to $3.1 million.

Legionnaire's disease tests negative for one Nebraskan

A Nebraska Health Department official said Tuesday that tests on one Nebraskan for Legionnaire's disease turned up negative.

Dr. Paul Stoesz said the tests were done at the federal Center for Disease Control at Atlanta. Tests on five other Nebraskans have not been completed.

The six persons suffered respiratory diseases during August and all recovered, Stoesz said, but physicians think Legionnaire's disease may have been the cause.

Dense fog said cause of accident

Dense fog Tuesday morning was blamed in a one-car accident which hospitalized a mother and her daughter.

Two-year-old Layle Tomkiewicz was listed in critical condition at Lincoln General Hospital. Her mother, Annabelle, 29, of Rt. 7, was listed in good condition.

The woman was driving south on N.W. 40th when she failed to see a stop sign before the road ended in an intersection with the Waverly Rd., according to sheriff's deputies. Her car skidded across the intersection into an embankment.

Bus riders perish

La Paz, Bolivia (UPI) — Twenty-five passengers on an interurban bus died when their vehicle collided with a truck.

Manure seal to stay

Omaha (UPI) — The creator of a 60-foot-wide presidential seal made of composted cow manure that President Carter was supposed to see but apparently didn't said Monday he planned to keep his artistic effort intact.

Jerard Pearson, 31, Omaha, said he planned to plant crops on the compost so the seal outline would remain visible from the air.

Pearson labored last week to construct the seal in hopes Carter would see it from the air on his visit to Offutt Air Force Base Saturday. The seal is on private property a mile from the end of Offutt's runway 21.

However, Rep. John Cavanaugh, D-Neb., who was seated next to Carter, said he didn't believe the President saw the compost because of the rain and fog enclosing the air base.

Pearson said Monday the President's staff apparently assumed Carter's only purpose was to "see the secrets" of SAC and neglected to inform him of the artwork calling attention to the need to reuse natural resources.

Pearson said the project, which is framed in limestone, cost less than $100 and he may create more art from compost in the future.

He said one of his associates distributed press releases on the seal to about 75 reporters accompanying Carter. Pearson said he subsequently has been interviewed on national public radio and for a magazine article.

Andersen to be offered job as Hastings chief of police

Hastings (AP) — Hiring Omaha Police Chief Richard Andersen as chief of the Hastings police department will add a measure of professionalism to both the police division and city government in general, Mayor Robert Allen said Tuesday.

"It could be one of the most important things that has ever happened to Hastings," Allen said, speaking from his department store, Allen's of Hastings. "If you get a chance of finding a diamond in the streets, you might as well grab it."

Allen said he had hoped to meet with City Council Tuesday to take a formal vote and then draft an official lettering offering the position to Andersen but he was unable to raise a quorum. He said that he hoped the formalities might be taken care of by Wednesday.

In addition to the challange of taking charge of the Hastings police division, Allen said he thought Andersen might have a personal interest in moving to Hastings since his daughter, Mrs. Dale C. Cockerill lives there.

Mrs. Cockerill would not comment on the possibility of her father becoming police chief, saying, "you'll have to talk to my father."

Andersen, attending a convention of police chiefs in Grand Island, confirmed that he was being considered for the post but would not say if he would accept it.

A 26-year veteran of the Omaha police force, Andersen has been chief nearly 10 years to the day. He was instrumental in inaugurating the city-wide "911" emergency communications system, a fact that impressed Allen, who said Hastings needs a similar system.

"I would hope that the job would evolve into something more than just being police chief," Allen said, adding that Andersen's appointment might bolster city government.

Morning car crash kills mother and child

Weeping Water (AP) — A young Auburn woman and her 2½-year-old son were killed early Tuesday in a head-on collision north of here on Nebraska 50, a Cass County sheriff's office spokesman reported.

The victims were identified as Bonnie Jean Gillette, 26, and her son, Terry.

Their deaths raised Nebraska's 1977 road toll to 284, compared with 319 a year ago.

Mrs. Gillette's husband, Kenneth, 28, and the driver of the other car, David Fauth, 20, Omaha, were listed in serious condition at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Lincoln.

Another Gillette child, 5-year-old Shari, suffered minor injuries in the 5 a.m. crash, which occurred 1½ miles north of Weeping Water, the spokesman said.

The Cass County sheriff's department was continuing its investigation.

Nebraska City youth killed trying to cross Highway 2

Nebraska City (AP) — A student at Nebraska City Lourdes High School was killed Tuesday when he was struck by a car as he crossed Highway 2 four miles west of here.

The fatal victim was Daniel J. Pfeiffer, 14, of Nebraska City.

The Otoe County Sheriff's Office said the driver of the car was Doris Straube, 22, who lives in Otoe County.

The sheriff's office said the youth was in a van that pulled off the road. He got out of the van and darted across the road when he was struck.

The 1977 Nebraska highway fatality toll stands at 285 compared with 321 on this date one year ago.

Ag council to examine new state marketing unit

Farm Editor

The Nebraska Agricultural Council, an umbrella group of 22 farm organizations, will examine the new state Department of Agriculture Marketing Division Nov. 15 at the next council meeting.

The council Tuesday also voted to ask a representative of the Internal Revenue Service to attend the next meeting to discuss tax laws related to American investments in overseas farming operations that produce grain and livestock in competition with U.S. farmers.

Council members also discussed the establishment of a fee system for diagnostic tests at the University of Nebraska Veterinary Science Laboratory. The council wants the university to deposit testing fees into a revolving fund to ensure adequate funding to continue and expand the service.

Council President Paul Grabouski of Beatrice read a letter from UNL Vice Chancellor Martin Massengale noting that a special committee has been appointed to look into the possibility of setting up a reasonable fee schedule.

Maynard Jensen
. . . council president

A second letter from state Sen. Douglas Bereuter noted that state law does permit the university to establish a fund and to charge fees for such services but it wasn't mandatory. Hans Jensen of Aurora, a former state senator, read the law saying "I feel that the law is mandatory."

The laboratory does charge fees for out-of-state samples, but currently doesn't charge a fee for samples from within the state. Council delegates felt that the funds available for testing would be depleted unless a fee schedule was established for all tests in the near future.

After some discussion the council members voted to take a wait-and-see attitude on the fees issue.

In order to increase council membership, some members proposed that council members attend various farm association meetings around the state to explain how the council works.

"We need to explain that we are a good source of information. For our organization, I can honestly say we get our money's worth just by knowing whom to contact for information about a specific problem related to any one of several groups," said Alice Licht, who represents the grain, feed and fertilizer dealers associations on the council.

Ms. Licht advised members to bone up on the council's bylaws before trying to make a presentation to other farm groups.

The newly elected 1978 council officers are: Maynard Jensen, Nebraska Wool Growers, president; Dr. Charles Wempe, Nebraska Veterinary Medical Association, vice president; and Alfred Maronde, Nebraska Farmers Union, secretary-treasurer.

Fall harvesting continues, soil moisture 'adequate'

Fall harvest continued to advance well in most areas of Nebraska during the past week due to the cool, dry weather, the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said Tuesday.

Slowdown of harvesting activities in some areas was caused by a lack of storage or drying space or allowing crops to further "field dry," the service said in its weekly crop-weather report.

Topsoil moisture supplies declined slightly this past week and are now reported adequate in 80% of the counties and short in 20%. Subsoil moisture supplies also declined slightly to 86% adequate and 14% short. This compares to a year ago when topsoil was 68% short and subsoil 91% short.

Corn harvest continued to make good progress with 55% of the acreage harvested to date, the same as a year ago, but 10% ahead of normal.

Grain sorghum harvest also is moving along with over 65% of the crop harvested. Soybean harvest advanced steadily with nearly 70% of the crop harvested.

Sugar beet harvest is reported in full swing in the western portion of the state and is said over 50% completed.

Winter wheat is reportedly planted and growing adequately at this time. Most of the wheat acreage is said in good condition.

Rainfall received throughout the state during the past week included:

Burwell	.15	North Platte	.01
Grand Island	.17	Omaha	2.56
Lincoln	.25	Valentine	.02
Norfolk	.30

Feed grain stocks doubled

Nebraska feed grain stocks (oats, barley old crop corn and grain sorghum) in all positions totaled 3.4 million tons Oct. 1, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. This was more than double the 1976 level of 1.6 million tons.

Average monthly disappearance of 767,000 tons of feed grain stocks was 23% below a year ago, according to the report.

Total stocks of old crop corn were 78.5 million bushels, well above the past few years but 10% below 1973. Farm stocks of 30.9 million bushels compare with 17.6 million bushels last year. Off farm stocks totaled 47.6 million bushels, with average monthly disappearance 20% below 1976.

Sorghum stocks totaled 23.3 million bushels, more than double 1976 and the largest carryover since 1970. Average monthly disappearance was 11% below 1976.

Oat stocks totaled 34.8 million bushels, while barley stocks totaled 1.5 million bushels.

Wheat stocks amounted to 129.6 million bushels, 15% above a year ago. Wheat stored on farms is 31% above last year, while off farm locations are up 5% from 1976.

Rye stocks are reported up 9% at .65 million bushels. Old crop soybean stocks on hand Sept. 1 totaled 2.8 million bushels. Old crop soybean stocks on hand Sept. 1 totaled 2.8 million bushels, down 62% from a year ago and the smallest stocks since 1973.

Testing lab strains to accommodate 'super beast'

The largest tractor ever to set tires in the University of Nebraska Tractor Testing Laboratory is undergoing testing. Nicknamed "The Super Beast," the Allis Chalmers 8850 is so large that the laboratory exhaust hood had to be removed to allow the extra inches needed to wedge the machine into the lab. It is 22 feet long, including the three-point hitch, 11 feet, 7 inches tall to the top of the cab and 12 feet, 10 inches tall to the top of the exhaust pipes and is 12 feet wide, including the dual wheels. "The Beast" tips the scales at more than 29,000 pounds with a full gas tank. The tractor has a 254-horsepower rating on power takeoff.

Executions scheduled for two men

Associated Press

The Nebraska Supreme Court Tuesday scheduled January executions for convicted murderers Richard Dean Holtan and John Edward Rust.

The court ordered Rust be put to death in the electric chair Jan. 23 and that Holtan be executed Jan. 25.

Earlier this month, the State Supreme Court ordered that Erwin Charles Simants die in the electric chair Jan. 21. However, Simants' attorneys have requested a rehearing before the U.S. Supreme Court and that along with other legal options could delay his execution.

Those same options are available to Rust and Holtan.

Rust is a former South Dakota resident convicted of murdering Michael Kellogg, a civilian who came to the aid of police in a shootpout following an Omaha robbery in 1974.

Holtan shot and killed Omaha bartender Lawrence Loder in another 1974 robbery.

Simants was convicted of murdering six members of the Henry Kellie family of Sutherland in Oct. 1975.

The U.S. Supreme Court rejected the appeals of Holtan and Rust Oct. 17. Simants' appeal was rejected Oct. 12.

The last person to die in the electric chair in Nebraska was Charles Starkweather, who was executed June 25, 1959.

Curtis enrollment up

Curtis (UPI) — The University of Nebraska School of Technical Agriculture at Curtis had an enrollment of 252 students when classes began Oct. 5.

Gerald Huntwork, associate superintendent, said there were 157 first year students and 135 second year students to bring the number enrolled to five more than last year.

Stolen wire recovered

Omaha (AP) — Nearly 14,000 pounds of copper electrical wire stolen from the Dawson County Public Power District in Lexington have been recovered by Omaha police.

Omaha police said they were told early Tuesday by a Carter Lake policeman of a fire along the Missouri River. Officers said it appeared the persons allegedly responsible for the theft were trying to burn insulation off the wire. The wire was recovered and police later arrested an Omaha man on suspicion of possession of stolen property.

Building sale planned

Grand Island (UPI) — The St. Francis Hospital Board Tuesday approved the sale of the current hospital building as soon as construction of a new building is completed.

Airport costs may rise

Grand Island (UPI) — Frontier Airlines costs at the Hall County Regional Airport will increase if agreement is reached on a proposal suggested by the Airport Authority. Frontier has been operating without a lease for the past two years and is currently negotiating on a lease agreement.

The authority has agreed to two alternatives — increase the per foot rental from $5.60 to $6.50 for one-year, or from $5.60 to $6.60 on a three-year contract. Frontier also pays a monthly $850 security fee.

Honors due DeCamp

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh has been selected as one of seven Vietnam War veterans to be honored by No Greater Love, an organization which tries to recognize "outstanding achievement by Vietnam War veterans." The selection panel consisted of Washington newsmen.

The veterans selected will receive awards tonight in ceremonies at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington.

Tangeman said favored

The state College Board of Trustees will name a new Peru State College president Friday.

Larry Tangeman, Chadron State College academic vice president and former acting president of the school, is believed to be the search committee's choice as the successor to Dr. Douglas Pearson, who resigned in July.

Dawson team to compete

A Dawson County 4-H horse judging team will represent Nebraska in the Nov. 5 Keystone International Livestock Exposition 4-H horse judging contest in Harrisburg, Pa.

Two Omaha men arrested after weekend gambling raids

Omaha (UPI) — Police have arrested two more suspects, including a former Omaha police officer, based on evidence seized during weekend gambling raids.

Police said former policeman Leonard J. (Moe) Gass, 43, Omaha, and Logan Fontenelle, 38, Omaha, were taken into custody Monday. Detectives said they were preparing warrants for other arrests in the ongoing investigation.

Gass was charged with three counts of gambling based on evidence confiscated at Paltani's Lounge in central Omaha during Sunday's raids. Fontenelle was charged with five counts of gambling.

Police said Fontenelle is a descendant of Chief Logan Fontenelle of the Omaha Indian tribe.

Gass, a police officer for about three years before he resigned under pressure in 1963, was fined for gambling in 1973.

Edward Paltani, 32, who told police he was a bartender at the bar, was arrested on 11 gambling counts. The bar is owned by a corporation headed by Paltani's mother, Bernyce, and a brother, Thomas.

Police said although the bar was closed for business, they confiscated $10,000 in cash, various gambling-related items and 20 adult sex films.

Six men and a woman, who allegedly worked for Paltani, were arrested in simultaneous raids on homes in West Omaha and Douglas County.

Police alleged the gambling operation processed between $10,000 and $20,000 in bets every weekend.

an open letter to parents from McDonald's Restaurants

What we are doing to make Halloween safer for your children.

Many parents have become concerned about the treats their children receive at Halloween.

We know. We're parents, too.

So we created McDonald's Halloween coupon books.

25 cent value for a nickel.

There are 20 coupons in each book, and each coupon is redeemable for a free 25-cent soft drink, at any participating McDonald's restaurant.

The cost of each book of 20 coupons is only $1.00. That's just five cents per coupon.

You can buy McDonald's Halloween coupons right now at McDonald's. And the coupons can be redeemed only from November 1st until November 30, 1977.

Give them to trick-or-treaters.

Give away McDonald's Halloween coupons to the ghosts and goblins when they come to your house.

It's a safe, sensible, and fun way to approach Halloween.

McDonald's is working to make Halloween safe for your children. We urge you all to join with us.

We do it all for you. McDonald's®

The Very Personal Power of Print

James Thurber, I think of first.
Towards the end, he could not see
drawn nor read what he had written.
A blind man.

Who made me laugh at things that only he had ever seen.
And I thank E. B. White, whose tribute to Thurber made me cry for a man whom I had never met.
That happened
in print.
But before Thurber, before White, print had made me what I am.
Dick and Jane, Spot and Puff.
And Mutt and Jeff.
And all the Sunday
Funnies. (Remember The Spirit?)
Comic books of all sorts. Action
Comics. Classics
Illustrated—approved by teachers, though not for book reports.
Bazooka bubble-gum wrappers.
And trading cards.
(I once had four Dimaggio's, all Dom.)
Textbooks, of course.
(Lake Titicaca, in Peru, is one of . . . the tintinnabulation of the bells, of the bells . . . the sum of the squares of the two sides . . . was called The Hundred Years' War.)
Required Reading
Lists: Treasure Island,
Huckleberry Finn, *Tom
Sawyer*. Reading too good to be required.

And books, though not required, approved by parents: Tom Swift, the Bobbsey Twins, The Hardy Boys.
Unending series of books, one for your birthday,
another for Christmas. (My sister read Nancy Drew.)

And the magazines favored by my parents, now dead—the magazines, not my parents: Collier's, with monkey covers; American, with Nero Wolfe, complete in this issue;
Life, Look, and the Post, with Tugboat Annie and Alexander Botts.
Forbidden books. I, the Jury. God's Little Acre.
Forever Amber. Pale stuff now, compared to the four-color racks of the hard-core stores.
These tumble forward, as I write, from wherever they have been these almost forty years. They bring with them other memories:

My first car, a '48 Ford.
I met it in two lines of classified print and shed it, later, in another two.
Football programs.
And City
Championships.

We won in '52. 54-0. You can see me in the crowd, right here in the yearbook. (My sister saved prom programs.)
Forms: entrance exams;
a draft card; a 201
file; a marriage license; birth certificates.
All print. All, my life.
Oh, I grant you, print has its moments of great state and profundity and timeless import.
And, yes,
print is a most pervasive—and persuasive—
communications medium.

But print's impact is too close to me to stand in awe of.
James Thurber, I think of first.

But print's impact is too close to me to stand in awe of.

Waverly council studying airport

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

Waverly — A new airport for private planes may someday be located at Waverly.

The Waverly City Council is sponsoring a committee to survey community interest in the idea.

One big supporter of the concept is Waverly City Councilman Roger Bartlett, who says he believes another airfield is needed in Lancaster County to "relieve the crunch" at Lincoln Municipal Airport.

Lincoln Municipal is one of the busiest airports for private planes in the country, he noted.

Details of the idea will be discussed at the council meeting on November 7, Bartlett said.

Another argument for a Waverly location is the fact that Lincoln's Arrow Airport, on city-owned sanitary landfill property, is due to close soon, Bartlett said.

In other recent action, the Waverly Council established a curfew for youth 16 years and under, to be in effect from midnight to 5 a.m. each morning.

The action was prompted by a rash of vandalisms.

Bartlett said he was the only council member to vote against the measure. "We won't be able to enforce it; we have no police to back it up," he said.

Bartlett has urged the council to hire a police officer for the town, rather than relying on the Lancaster County Shriff's office, as is done at present.

The police officer question has been tabled for six months, Bartlett said.

Old airport building is good investment

A building that was standing for 10 years on airport property also was rotting, here and there, and it's costing the Lincoln Airport Authority an extra $12,000.

But it won't cause a problem, since the income from the structure will be more than $48,000 a year.

The building, located in Air Park West, is being used by the Department of Corrections work release program and houses about 100 inmates under minimum security.

A preliminary figure alloted by the board allowed $15,000 to fix the building for the program. About $13,000 was spent.

When the new tenants moved in they found another several thousand dollars of work was needed such as replacing windows and patching water and heater pipes.

The extra $12,000 is a bargain since inmates have done much of the work on the building. Their labor was free.

Board members had no qualms about approving the money because of the projected income in the lease. Corrections officials who attended the meeting said they liked the building, even with the problems.

In other business, the airport board:

— Approved a $7,175.75 audit fee payment to Philip Johnson and Co. of Lincoln.

— Approved $10,600 to buy two new lawnmowers by using the city's purchasing power.

— Approved the replacement of charcoal filters in the airport's terminal building.

— Allowed the Lincoln Parks and Recreation Department to use Bowling Lake for recreation purposes. There's no lease or fee, but the parks department must maintain the property.

— Authorized another $8,000 to repair 600 feet of railroad tracks.

— Approved purchase of a $3,500 backhoe for an airport tractor to dig trenches.

— Leased buildings to the Brunswick Corp. for $645 a month; two to Central States Distributors for $855 and $1,400; and Nebraska State Department of Education for $439 a month; a portion of a building to Kawasaki for $395 a month.

— Tentatively approved a lease agreement with Duncan Aviation and Lincoln Aviation for several t-hangars.

Waverly and Colfax tops in land judging

Columbus — A Waverly FFA team and a Colfax County 4-H team came away with top honors in the State Land Judging Contest Tuesday in Columbus.

The winning FFA team was composed fo Steve Althouse, Tom Sherman, Dave Fahleson and Todd Minchow, all of Waverly. The team scored 835 out of a possible 1,200 points. The top 4-H team was composed of Chris Clausen, Steve Schlautman, Dan Koliha and Don Blum, all of Clarkson. The 4-H team's score was 818.

Second place FFA team was Norris FFA, scoring 785. The team was composed of Dwight TeKolste, Del Moormeier, Ernie Shipe and Dave Docter. Third place went to West Point, fourth place to Schuyler and fifth place to South East Consolidated at Stella.

Second place 4-H team was Valley County 4-H with 800 points, consisting of Kevin Sheldon and Diane Lundstedt, both of North Loup, Echo Sperling of Scotia and Troy Rice of North Loup. Nance County placed third, Greeley County fourth and Otoe County fifth.

The top nine individuals in land judging, plus their organization, follow in order: Craig Gydesen, Greeley County 4-H; Steve Althouse, Waverly FFA; Dale Bremer, North Loup-Scotia FFA; Dan Koliha, Colfax County 4-H; Marianne Buskirk, Alliance FFA; Del Moormeier, Norris FFA; John Nievohner, Lyons FFA; Mike Grabber, Hemingford FFA; and Tom Sherman, Waverly FFA.

Local leaders said ignored

State Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica said Tuesday the federal government, in drafting its new urban growth strategy for metropolitan areas, is ignoring local leadership and the ability of state governments to institute fiscal and local reforms.

"Incentives for institutional reform aimed at problem avoidance are far more important than simply spending more and more money on our urban problems," he said. "Without institutional reform, more urban problems will be created than we can possibly solve."

To avoid these, Bereuter, who has announced his candidacy for Congress from the 1st District, suggested a variety of incentives for stopping the further fragmentation of government.

If all states had granted their largest cities "uniquely strong annexation powers much earlier, as Nebraska did with Omaha and Lincoln, American metropolitan areas wouldn't have the severe problems in governmental fragmentation and tax base inequities they now exhibit," Bereuter said.

Safeway robber admits guilt

Rudy Helenick, 37, has pleaded guilty to robbing the Piedmont Shopping Center Safeway Store on May 29.

According to police a man brandishing a sawed-off .22-caliber rifle locked three employes from the store in a milk cooler and then fled with money from cash registers.

Police chased Helenick through Northeast Lincoln and arrested him after he lost control of his car and crashed into a porch at 69th and Platte Ave.

Helenick, of Illinois, changed his plea to guilty after the county attorney's office agreed to drop one charge of using a firearm to commit a felony and another charge of fleeing to avoid arrest. A presentence investigation was ordered by Lancaster District Judge William Hastings.

NETV gets federal grant

A $428,000 grant has been approved for Nebraska educational television by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting out of Washington.

The grant will be used for community service programming and production in Nebraska.

Virginia Smith challenges ban on tetracycline

United Press International

Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., challenged the food and drug administration to prove the use of a certain antibiotic in animal feeds poses a threat to public health.

The FDA has said it plans to ban the use of tetracyclines in animal feeds because of a public health threat.

"If this were the case, surely there would be unquestionable evidence on file . . . to back up this supposition," Mrs. Smith told the FDA in a protest letter.

Retired teachers group urges benefit bill support

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

Retired teachers representatives Tuesday urged the Legislature's Retirement Systems Committee to support a bill to supplement current benefits in view of changing economic conditions.

Nebraska voters in 1972 approved a constitutional amendment allowing benefits for retired public employes to be adjusted to reflect changes in the cost of living or in wage levels since they retired.

But that amendment has never been implemented by legislative enactment, John Lynch of Lincoln told the committee.

Lynch is legislative chairman of the Nebraska State Retired Teachers Association.

LB423, sponsored by Sen. Keith Boughn of Norfolk, is the vehicle for such implementation, Lynch said.

The bill proposes that retired teachers be provided with a state supplement if their total monthly income from the teachers retirement system and Social Security payments does not equal 50% of the average current salary of certified school employes.

The 1976-77 average salary is $11,800.

Lynch said senators could amend the bill to provide that only teachers with 25 years of service would be eligible for the assistance.

Lynch said he believes it would be fair to provide for such an adjustment every five years, instead of annually, if the Legislature wants to hold down supplementary costs.

And, he said, senators might even want to consider a 40% guarantee instead of the proposed 50% of average current salary to reduce costs.

The important thing is to provide some supplementary assistance for retired teachers, "many of whom now live on the edge of poverty," Lynch said.

"Retired teachers need to purchase today's goods and services with today's dollars," he noted.

Lynch said a rough calculation of the costs of LB423, based on figures derived from a questionnaire sent to retired Nebraska teachers, indicates the bill could require $1.3 million in supplementary payments at a 50% level.

A 40% level would reduce estimated costs to about $300,000.

This would be a new approach to help those in dire need," Lynch told the senators.

Barney Gyger, speaking for the Omaha Retired Teachers Association, endorsed the concept, describing the bill as "a real good idea."

Home was scene of murders that rocked town of Fall River, Mass.

Lizzie Borden was acquitted of murder.

Stories by J.L. Schmidt

"Lizzie Borden took an ax
And gave her mother forty whacks.
When she saw what she had done
She gave her father forty-one."

Whoa. This whole Lizzie Borden thing has gone far enough, and gotten way out of whack, by at least 57 whacks.

In addition, 85 years of misinformation, like the popular 40 whacks doggerel of unknown origin, and theories espoused by armchair detectives from coast to coast, have clouded the issue.

What most people forget is that Lizzie was never found guilty, nor was anyone else ever tried for the murders of Andrew and Abby Borden.

Now, enters Dr. Mary Smith, associate professor of English at Nebraska Wesleyan University, and author of "Lament for a Legend: the Lizzie Borden Case Revisited." The article, soon to appear in "The Armchair Detective," a publication of the University of California extension press, suggests a possible solution to the puzzle of who killed the Bordens that hot August day in 1892.

The deed was done in the tiny mill town of Fall River, Mass., but Dr. Smith's introduction to the infamous Lizzie was in Colorado Springs, Colo., where she viewed a play on the subject. That play whetted her interest and opened the door to years of research, including the copying and scanning of trial reports from The New York Times.

Nestled in a comfortable armchair behind her desk in Room 200 of the Old Main Building on the Wesleyan campus, Dr. Smith pieced together the Borden puzzle.

"Andrew Borden was wealthy, but tight," she said. He was an undertaker, turned property speculator, and worth probably $150,000, "quite a hunk of change in those days," she added.

Lizzie was 32, a bit plump, not attractive, and given to "funny spells," later diagnosed as epilepsy. She was living at home with her older sister Emma, her father, a stepmother she didn't like, and an Irish maid, Bridget.

Her only hobby, outside of teaching Congregational Sunday school and choir, was raising pigeons. The pigeons were the target of numerous would-be thieves and were finally decapitated by a disgruntled Andrew, with an ax.

Aha. A motive, you say. But, wait, "It was well known that Lizzie and her father were the best of friends, in spite of his unpopular marriage and some property matters which upset his daughters, Dr. Smith said.

On the morning of Aug. 4, the Borden family ate cold mutton, sugar cookies and bananas for breakfast. "Yecch," Dr. Smith offered in retrospect. "That would be enough to spawn murderous thoughts in anybody."

Andrew left for town, "where he probably picked up nails and pieces of string from the streets," Dr. Smith said; Uncle John, a part-time guest in the Borden household, left to visit friends in town; Emma was conveniently out of town and the maid was washing windows, outside. Mrs. Borden was in the house, in her room probably, Dr. Smith added.

Lizzie told investigating officers she was in the house, too, but then later changed her story and said she had gone out to the barn to look for lead for fishing sinkers (she apparently was quite an angler) before returning to the house where she found her father's body.

"Imagine sitting in a barn in the middle of a New England summer eating pears," Dr. Smith says. "A bit preposterous."

The scene that greeted Lizzie's eyes was a bloody one, to say the least. Andrew Borden had been killed with some "20 odd whacks of an ax," Dr. Smith said. A far cry from the legendary 41. "The act of murder was brutal enough that there was blood splattered behind the pictures on the walls of the parlour," she added.

Mrs. Borden's body was discovered in an upstairs bedroom, apparently felled with 14 ax blows. She was in a kneeling position, and Dr. Smith speculated that she had been "dusting under a bed or putting away some laundry."

Lizzie told the maid, who told the neighbors who told the police, but the police took a while to get to the murder scene, because "it just happened to be the day of the annual policeman's picnic, and they were all at the park," Dr. Smith chuckled.

When the police did come they "seem to have fallen over their fat Irish feet in bungling the investigation," she added.

It took them several days to decide on a suspect, and when they fingered Lizzie, the public couldn't believe it. "It was enough of a shock to the average Fall River resident when they learned the bloody details of the murderscene, but charges of patricide piled on top of the murder were almost too much for people to believe," Dr. Smith said.

What finally got Lizzie acquitted "the day the courtroom shook with joy" is questionable. Lizzie's attorney was a good friend of the judge. He also was governor when the judge was elevated to the bench, "and that's a good friend," Dr. Smith added. That fact, coupled with the "jury's unwillingness to believe the entire affair," apparently was the winning combination, she added.

No one else was ever charged in the murders. Lizzie sold the family home and bought a new one in a "better part of town," but she "mysteriously gave up all her church and social activities, and lived a quiet life until her death in 1927," Dr. Smith said. Lizzie paid Bridget's way back to Ireland. Emma lived with Lizzie for three years then "moved out, all of a sudden," she added.

Dr. Smith is critical of most of the theories on the case offered by other writers. Many have left out the details which didn't support their cause, she said.

But the Smith theory, explained in her article, pays careful attention to detail, especially the 90-minute gap that doctors figured occurred between the deaths of Abby and Andrew.

Bridget, driven by physical exhaustion, killed Abby, a fact that Lizzie discovered, and used to her own advantage when, a short while later (maybe 90 minutes), Andrew returned and went to the parlor for his usual late morning nap.

"It wasn't planned, but Lizzie saw the opportunity to kill her father and with Bridget's help, confuse the authorities," Dr. Smith explained.

"It was a chance, but it worked beautifully. Lizzie was charged with the death of her mother and acquitted. She paid to send the maid back to Ireland, and thus kept her secret safe, within herself," she added.

Lillian de la Torre, the woman who wrote the play that inspired Dr. Smith, has seen the Smith theory and called it "feasible," Dr. Smith said. Other reaction will probably come after the article is circulated, she added.

No matter what the reaction, Dr. Smith obviously is convinced about her theory. Take a look at the closing lines in her lament:

". . . and if there is any chance beyond the grave to arrange a sort of ghostly conversation, I know whose partricidal hand I want to shake."

Prof doubles as super sleuth

Dr. Mary Smith grew up with mystery.

From her girlhood home in Colorado Springs, to the halls of Harvard University, the associate professor of English at Nebraska Wesleyan University has surrounded herself with mystery books, plays, and friends who read and write them.

She was 14 when she read an anthology by James Sandoe, then a professor at the University of Colorado in Boulder. That work, "Murder, Plain and Fanciful," gets the credit for whetting her appetite, an appetite which feasted on a personal meeting with Sandoe and noted playwright Lillian De la Torre while Dr. Smith was a student at Colorado College.

The De la Torre play, "Goodbye Miss Lizzie Borden," steered Dr. Smith onto the "intriguing subject of Lizzie's guilt or innocence," she said.

"Lillian said that Emma, Lizzie's older sister who supposedly was out of town during the 1892 murders of Andrew and Abby Borden, did it," she added, "but I don't agree," Dr. Smith's theory, put forth in a work which will soon appear in "The Armchair Detective," lays the blame on the family maid, Bridget, and Lizzie.

"Lillian has read it, and thinks it might work," Dr. Smith said of her soon-to-be-published theory. Sandoe agrees, she added.

Dr. Smith now shares her Lincoln home with Sandoe, two cats, two dogs, and volumes of mystery and mystery-related books and plays. She also opens her home to friends and students who gather for the annual Lizzie Borden Memorial Dinner.

"Each year, on or about August 4, we get together and eat lamb and pears in sugar syrup, and read the appropriate headlines from The New York Times," she said. The Bordens reportedly ate mutton, sugar cookies and pears the day of the murders, she added.

But Lizzie isn't the only one remembered. "We celebrate Orm the Monk, among others, each with an appropriate festivity," she said.

Dr. Smith and some fellow Wesleyan faculty members also have a pancake ceremony, historically on Wednesdays, "when eating pancakes off campus was an appropriate alternative to attending chapel" she said, reflecting on the days when chapel was mandatory.

Teaching Victorian literature, human sexuality, death and dying, and the holocaust as an essay, take up Dr. Smith's non-mystery hours. Some more of that precious "free" time will probably be taken up with fan mail, as the Armchair Detective fans decide to agree, or disagree, with the Smith theory on Lizzie Borden.

"I'm looking forward to some reaction," she said with a devilish gleam in her eye. "I may get enough material for another article."

Uncle Sam Slick leads reader into nightmare

Book Review

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

"The Public Burning" by Richard Coover is a comic book, a savage disembowelment of the American spirit and a masterful, empathetic creation of Richard Nixon; its breadth is that great.

It's peopled by Uncle Sam Slick and his Sons of Light, the Phantom and his Legions of Darkness, Dwight Eisenhower, Nixon, William O. Douglas and other characters and personalities on stage in the fifties.

It's tone is feverish from the outset and builds from there. We're not even out of the prologue and we meet Uncle Sam Slick . . .

"I can ride on a flash of lightnin', catch a thunderbolt in my fist, swaller niggers whole, raw or cooked, slip without a scratch down a honey locust . . .

"Yippee! I'm wild and wooly and fulla fleas, ain't never been curried below the knees, so if you wish to avoid foreign collisions you had better abandon the ocean, women and children first . . ."

Whew! Go get a glass of iced tea. Turn the television on.

This is a tough book to take a large doses. Read for an hour and your head starts to swim. How can Coover sustain this pitch, let alone keep cranking it up page after page?

Coover's vision swirls around the idea that Uncle Sam Slick has decided this June, 1953, that Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who actually were electrocuted on a conviction of selling Atom Bomb secrets to the Russians, should be executed in Times Square.

The Rosenbergs are at the center of a global struggle; it is communism against the Free World, light against darkness, Christianity against aetheism, Uncle Sam against the Phantom.

Occasionally, Coover lets the reader escape from this huge circus arena, where there is simply too much going on to absorb, And then the escape hatch leads to . . . the inside of Nixon's head.

We spend a lot of time in Nixon's head and this is as unsettling an experience as being outside in Coover's world, where the Phantom is seen exposing his hindend behind the New York Times Building.

Here in Nixon's head he has no secrets and he not only admits the flaws, insecurities, fears and failures, he dwells on them. It doesn't take long before the reader wants to flee . . ." "He shouldn't be telling me these things . . . I don't want to know . . . let me out of here . . . I've got problems of my own."

More than anything, the word that sums up Coover's third novel is powerful. His vision is a quirky, crazy nightmare. His literary craftsmanship is flawless. "The Public Burning" elicites a confusion of emotions, piled one on another without time for a recovery.

Because of this dizzying effect some readers will dislike the book. Coover forces the reader to stand apart, be on guard at all times. Careful now, what's Coover up to? Maybe he just wants to make you laugh to make you feel like a blood-thirsty monster on the next page.

It's a singular book and should not be approached with preconceptions. A reader's reactions will be forced into unfamiliary channels. But without doubt "The Public Burning" will provoke reaction, powerful reaction.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We are a retired couple living next door to a very nice elderly woman who recently lost her husband.

I remarked to my husband yesterday, "That little widow seems to be getting so thin and frail lately. I suppose living alone as she does, she doesn't bother to cook for herself. Perhaps when I make something special, I should take some over to her."

My husband surprised me with the following observation: "Heavens, no. That would give her the notion that we think she's not able to look after herself."

Abby, that notion never crossed my mind. Do you think my husband is right? Or am I?

GOOD NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: You are. But people who live alone miss much more than food. They miss companionship. If you feel generous, do something for the widow's spirit as well as her stomach. Invite her to join you sometime. The simplest meal with company will be more appreciated than the finest delicacy alone.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 15-year-old girl. I met a boy the other night at a party. We go to the same school. We liked each other right away, and before I knew it, we were in the bedroom making out. (Nothing serious happened.) There were about 10 other kids there, including some football players from our high school.

This boy is a key club member and is neat up at school. Abby, whenever I see him in the hall now, he doesn't even speak to me. You would think he never saw me before. This has me confused. What's wrong with him? Or is it me?

MIXED-UP

DEAR MIXED-UP: You were foolish to "make out" with a boy you had just met at a party. He either (a) is ashamed of himself, (b) doesn't want anyone to know he knows you, or (c) doesn't recognize you in the light.

DEAR ABBY: When I was a young boy, I lost the thumb and first two fingers of my right hand in a farming accident. I learned to write with my left hand, but I have another problem. People are always wanting to shake hands with me, and it's embarrassing when they realize that I have some fingers missing.

I have tried extending my left hand to shake hands, but it's very awkward, and only calls attention to the fact that something must be wrong with my right hand.

If you can solve this one, you'll be my friend for life.

SOUTHPAW

DEAR SOUTHPAW: Ask your doctor to arrange an appointment with someone who specializes in "prosthesis" (artificial limbs, fingers, thumbs, etc.) Some "artificial parts" are so well made they look (and feel) like the real thing.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Opening lead - queen of clubs.

When Sylvia first started to play at the club, she found herself under frequent assault by partners who rather volubly lectured her on what she should have done instead of what she had done.

These heated criticisms were somewhat unfair, since Sylvia invariably played only with the experts and they knew that, in the long run, she would contribute heavily to their winnings. Moreover, this stream of advice frequently caused Sylvia to misapply what she was told — and this in turn would induce further admonitions that would add to her already woebegone state of confusion.

It was therefore not surprising, when this deal came along, that Sylvia made a play unequalled in the long history of the club. She held the East cards and her partner led the queen of clubs against six notrump.

Declarer, a world-renowned expert, won the club with the king, cashed the A-K of hearts, and led a low diamond from dummy, planning to finesse the ten. He undoubtedly would have made the slam by this method of play, since the ten would force out West's ace and thus provide declarer with an entry to his hand to cash the queen of hearts.

Unfortunately, though, he was playing against Sylvia. She had been told repeatedly that on defense you play second-hand low and third-hand high. In this case, however, Sylvia somehow got the rule confused and thought she was supposed to play second-hand high and third-hand low.

Accordingly, when South led the low diamond from dummy Sylvia put up the queen! South played the king, which was won by West with the ace. As a result, there was now no way for declarer to escape a club loser and he wound up going down one.

Songwriter spins with new ideas

Amsterdam, The Netherlands (UPI) — When other kiddies were nodding off to nursery lullabies, Adrienne Anderson's widowed father was keeping her awake with his repertoire of popular songs, She was his audience in moments when he dreamed he had escaped from his New York garment factory and was doing what he had always wanted to do — act, sing, entertain.

"So I grew up knowing what a great song was," she said at the International Music Industry Conference here where she served as a reminder that there is now in the United States a brilliant band of women songwriters who rank among the best in the world of either sex.

They are a notable group, mostly uncommonly attractive and multi-talented like Ms. Anderson, though she may stand a little apart from Carol Sager, Carole King, Joni Mitchell and the rest in her vision of a recording as a new art form and in her determination to bring her concept to reality.

Songwriters come in all shapes and sizes, but if they ever decide to standardize the breed they could do a lot worse than Ms. Anderson for the design. She is thirtyish, darkly handsome with center-parted wavy hair brushed away from the crown of her head. She writes lyrics in which every word has to fight for its place. She talks to the point as well.

Like her father she almost missed her true vocation. She tried acting but realized she was no Lynne Fontanne. She sang in nightclubs, but her own ears advised her she was no Carmen Macrae. Solution: Put both these middling talents together in a nightclub act. A friend suggested a rehearsal pianist at $10 an hour, a boy from Brooklyn named Barry Manilow.

It was a fateful meeting for both of them. Manilow arrived, as Ms. Anderson recalls, "a gawky looking kid in a plaid jacket with his hair slicked down. "He was so straight he hadn't even played the Beatles standards. We figured it would take two months, but we spent so much time singing it took nine. He was a different person musically when we finished. I was his education."

Manilow is, of course, one of the rising superstars of pop. They wrote a great hit, "Could it Be Magic?" She has several songs on his recent albums as well as songs on Melissa Manchester's "Bright Eyes" album and title songs on other top albums. She writes most regularly now with Peter Allen, composer of the "I Go to Rio" album.

But all that was to come. The act she worked on with Manilow turned out to be too sophisticated, the musical arrangements too far out. A songwriter friend asked whether she had ever considered writing her own material, and Barry said "if you're going to write songs why not write with me?" They sold a few, but earnings were minute, and she realized she would have to strike out on her own.

She hired a studio for a couple of days and tinkled out a couple of songs on the piano. Barry played and sang them to a publisher, who liked the songs and, while considering what singer to show them to, listened carefully to Barry's voice. In a classic understatement he said: "You're not bad Barry — maybe we'll let you do the vocal."

"So," Ms. Anderson said, "Barry got his first record contract through my song."

Despite her success in the medium as it stands, and a hit songwriter is a very hot property indeed, she said she had "an almost breathless kind of ambition on a personal level to really do something different. I feel there is some kind of metamorphosis going on that could present a song in a new way. Electronics have opened the field in the last 10 or 15 years. Once the movies were content to show two people walking down a street; now films make a statement by distorting."

"I'm thinking of a new art form," she said, "in which a record would be to live performance what a film version is to a stage production. You can do with a camera what you can't do on a stage. You can do with electronic technology what a musician cannot do in real life. The new goal is not to renounce reality but to take it and distort it to make another statement."

Her ultimate aim — and she is working on it now that she is an established name — is to force recognition of the pop music record as a medium as separate and complete in itself as a book or a film.

Virgin birth may be possible in higher animals

Bar Harbor, Maine (AP) — A laboratory mouse born at the Jackson Laboratory here has provided living evidence that virgin birth may be possible in higher mammals, the genetics research center reported Wednesday.

The virgin birth process, known as parthenogenesis, is known to occur in lower forms of life.

In an account in the current issue of the scientific journal Nature, Dr. Leroy C. Stevens said the laboratory mouse has an unusual genealogy: three mothers and one father.

On one side of the family is a normal set of parents. On the other side is a foster mother and a "parthenote" from a virgin female.

A parthenote is an ovulated egg that acts as though it were fertilized, developing in the uterus for a time as an embryo, Stevens explained.

The senior staff scientist noted that while the parthenote initially has all the genetic capacity for life, normal growth usually stops after about a week. A parthenote has never developed to full term in the female in which it originated.

In his study, Stevens determined that the parthenote can develop in another female. He reported removing a parthenote from its virgin mother, fusing it with a normal embryo at the same stage of development, them implanting the new embryo in a foster mother where it came to full term and was born.

A cancer researcher, Stevens discovered in 1974 that parthenogenesis might be possible among mammals when he found virgin mice pregnant with parthenogenetic embryos. His findings were of interest because of potential insights into the still mysterious early stages of life.

Workers get movie break

Moscow (AP) — Workers at a furniture factory in Soviet Lithuania can relax during breaks by watching brief films shown in "rooms of good cheer," Tass reported.

The Soviet news agency noted that "the program is selected by each worker individually according to his taste and mood: there are small screens intended for individual watching.

"Without leaving the factory, the furnituremakers may admire a view of the Baltic, travel to the picturesque lakes of the republic or on the Kursh Spit," a narrow strip of land along Lithuania's coast, Tass said.

The workers get two breaks of six to eight minutes per shift, the dispatch said.

"Observations have shown that such rooms remove fatigue and improve the general sense of well-being, at the same time raising labor productivity by 10 to 15%," Tass said.

If you've ever thought about doing a little shoplifting, think again.

Think how easy it is to get caught.

Think how it must feel to get caught.

Think how you'd answer the question that's on every job application, "Have you ever been arrested? If so, explain."

Think how—to the people you know, and the people you love, and yes, even to yourself—you can never be the same person again.

Doctor forbids vigorous exercise

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 70 years old. Most of my friends take long walks, jog, bicycle ride, etc. But my doctor won't let me do any of these things. He tells me a block or so of walking and moderate housework is enough for me. I have asked why, but he just answers, "I want you to do only as I say." I am on daily heart medicine, and I feel fairly good.

My friends have advised me to change doctors. I have had mine for many years, and I do have faith in him. Are there different heart conditions that rule out exercise? You have said in your column that exercise is good for the heart. — Mrs. L.T.

Changing doctors is sometimes like changing messengers because you don't like the messages you're getting.

There are different types of heart disease and varying degrees of each. So no general rule about exercise can be made. Nor could I try to interpret the reason for your doctor's restrictions.

Exercise is good for all the muscles of the body, including those of the heart. But that doesn't mean one should go out and exercise a broken leg, for example — until the break has healed.

The point is that exercise has to be tailored to your tolerance level. You are 70 and apparently doing well with your heart medication. This is no time to start vigorous exercise. Walking is best. If you can walk more than a block without distress, fine. Remember, though, wherever you are in your walk, you are only halfway. You have to return home.

Your friends are not doing you any favor. Changing doctors has never changed a heart condition, to my knowledge. Yes, there are different heart disorders that require limitations on activity. Your friends probably do not have any of them. You have faith in your doctor, so stay with him, unpopular as his warnings are to you. He knows your condition and your limitations.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We hear a lot from the yoga people and health faddists about the advantages and benefits of standing on the head or shoulders upside down. It's said that it helps circulation, the heart itself, growth of hair, and many other goodies. Is there any basis to these claims? — H.E.

The human circulatory system has apparently adapted quite well to the upright stance. The heart pumps efficiently and valves in the veins aid circulation in the legs. The red-faced congestion caused by the upside-down maneuver doesn't help the brain, the hair, or anything else. Since right-side-up humans have as many feet problems as those of the head, you can't say the upside-down position would help either end.

Exercise in the horizontal or upright positions is sufficient. This doesn't mean I'm putting down yoga. It's just that such claims don't wash.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor tells me I have an upside-down stomach. But he never tells me what to do about it. I would like to know if walking is good for me. I can't breathe good. I am 62 years old. — Mrs. S.L.

An upside-down stomach is not a very descriptive term. What it really means is an extra large hiatal hernia — the opening at the place where the gullet passes through the diaphragm. A larger-than-usual part of the stomach protrudes through this opening. It can cause heart-like symptoms and a pain resembling angina.

There are several important things you can try to control the situation — small and frequent feedings of bland foods, weight loss if you need it, and the like. Walking within reason will not harm you. Heavy lifting will. Surgery is the only answer for such a severe hernia.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is parotitis? — J.S.

Inflammation of the parotid glands, as in mumps.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have read that vitamin A acid is used in the treatment of acne. Is this valid treatment, and must it be supervised by a doctor? My doctor says he has known of it for a long time, but thinks it is not effective. — T.W.

Information I have is that vitamin A acid is an accepted and effective form of treatment for acne. It can irritate the skin, however, so the treatment should be supervised by a doctor.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you say that a child who looks at pictures in his book, then makes up his own words to go with them instead of reading them correctly is dyslexic? — Mrs. F.

It's impossible to comment on such slender information as this. How old is the child? Is he able to read otherwise? It's true that this practice in children of reading age can be a symptom of a reading difficulty (dyslexia), but it need not mean anything more than laziness or disinterest. If the child is in school and having difficulty in classes, dyslexia may be involved. The teacher should be able to give you clues. Have his eyes been examined?

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Discussions examine role of Holy Spirit

Bad Soden, West Germany (AP) — Representatives of the Roman Catholic Church and the World Methodist Council have launched a new series of discussions on the role of the Holy Spirit in predominantly secularized societies.

United Methodist Bishop William R. Cannon of Atlanta, Ga., said that if agreement can be reached on the significance of "life in the Spirit," it would mean "both a creative and a far-reaching contribution to the total course of ecumenical relationships."

Health Tip

One of the greatest gifts a person can give is the gift of blood, according to the Nebraska Medical Association.

The importance of blood in modern medicine emphasizes the importance of keeping a constant supply on hand. Blood is needed both for ordinary daily use and for the unpredictable demands likely in cases of floods, tornados, explosions, or other types of disasters.

In spite of the many advances in medical science, there is still no other source of blood for use in medicine other than the human donor. Every healthy person between the ages of 21 and 60 should consider giving blood. Only in this way can it be insured there will be an adequate supply should one need it for himself or another member of his family.

Any large hospital is likely to have a blood bank where the donation can be made. In many communities, small as well as large, national agencies or local groups operate blood banks.

The Nebraska Medical Association believes the gift of blood is important. It may save a life.

War more popular than peace

San Francisco — Brisk October nights. A sliver of new moon floating in a buttermilk sky. Down at the docks, the whale-saver Greenpeace is docked alongside a new Navy super-destroyer.

At an open house the other day, hundreds of people came down to see the destroyer. Hardly anybody visited Greenpeace. The whale-saving ship goes to sea. Challenges whalers killing whales. Unarmed, except for the crew's convictions. The destroyer carries the latest guns.

War is more popular than Greenpeace.

The gray whales are migrating to Baja California. Down to Scammon's Lagoon where they will make love and give birth to baby whales.

The whale's brain is only a fifth the size of a human's. Yet the whale does not build super-destroyers. Nor plan ways to remove his fellow whale from the face of the earth. I told the moppets:

"The whale does not go to stand-up cocktail parties. Does not have yearly check-ups or worry about salt-free diets.

"The whale swims peacefully through the sea. And, if he doesn't watch out, is harpooned." (Even as you and I.)

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

"Father, can I have five dollars? I've got to etc." "Dad, I need two dollars for the etc."

I said: "We're all headed for the poorhouse! D'ye hear the news?"

Teen-agers have more needs than when I was polishing my shoes for the junior prom.

There are compensations though. Jeans are the Class A uniform of the younger set. The more ragged the better. (To match the nerves of the squire of the scatter.)

We save on other things: "Don't you think you'd better get a haricut?"

"No! Let it alone." (He looks like an English sheepdog. And that's the way he wants to look.)

Thus we count our blessings and have a go at the cooking sherry.

In Teheran, Ali Zihurian reached the age of 67, his brain presumably five times bigger than a whale's. But how did he use it?

He told reporters: "I attribute my health and happiness to my marriage to 157 wives over the past half century."

I don't attribute my health and happiness to multiple marriages. Nor swimming to Scammon's Lagoon for a whale of a time. (I was at Scammon's Lagoon a couple of years ago. Only a whale could love it.)

Health and happiness come from presenting yourself as a moving target. As even a whale should know.

"I don't have any change in my pocket now. I'll give you the five dollars tomorrow. OK?"

At stand-up cocktail parties: "Do you mind if I sit down? I've got a bad back."

"Of course you can! Here, let me get you a chair. Anything else?"

"Well, if it wouldn't be too much trouble. Another martini?"

Thus we hold off the Great Harpooner.

Finland agreement is reached

Bridgewater, N.J. (AP) — National Starch & Chemical Corp. and Raision Tehtaat of Raisio, Finland, have agreed in principle to form a joint venture to produce polyvinyl acetate polymers and copolymers in Finland, it was announced.

National Starch will purchase 50% of the shares of Oy Raikem AB, the chemical division of Raision Tehtaat. At its factory in Mietoinen, Oy Raikem (AB) produces polymer emulsions for use in the paper, adhesives, and paint industries in the Scandinavian countries.

Ed officers picked

Ankeny, Iowa (UPI) — Ralph Lynn of Des Moines was named to the Heartland Education Association board of directors.

E.E. Andrews of Boone was named vice president of the board.

Relaxation improves health and promotes success

Tension is a problem every working woman faces. You may be tired, aching, or dreading life instead of enjoying it. Because you're probably not really sick, your doctor's advice would undoubtedly be, "There's nothing wrong with you. Just take it easy. Relax!"

Relaxation is literally the art of dropping tension. To be truly relaxed means being at ease with your work and your other obligations. You can do almost anything better if you do it with less tension and less tightening-up of your nerves and muscles.

There's much truth in the old saying, "All work and no play makes for not only dollars, but unhappiness." Relaxation not only boosts your health, it promotes success in your social and business activities.

Memo to a Working Woman

By Muriel Lederer

One requirement for keeping physically fit is to establish a properly balanced daily life. This means you must have a sufficient amount of rest (including an adequate amount of sleep), periods of relaxation every day and definite vacation periods. Also, if you spend part of your day in some vigorous activity, you are more likely to take stress or strain better.

Now is the best time to start relaxing; don't wait till you think you need to. You may need relaxation when you feel fine, just as you sometimes need exercise when you feel tired. Feelings of fatigue aren't true fatigue. Sometimes you feel groggy or let down when you are actually relaxed.

On the other hand, when you feel animated or exhilarated, are staying up late and keeping very busy, you should actually be taking time out to rest. You need to learn to relax your body and mind when they've had a workout.

As any tense person will admit, nothing is harder than learning to relax, to play a little. Too many of us drive ourselves so hard in our jobs or household and family duties we don't think we have time to play.

Perhaps you're too busy to relax often. It's been such a long time you've forgotten how to unwind, how to be at peace with yourself, and how to be tranquil without artificial inducements.

You can start the art of relaxing right away with any of these tension easers:

—Application of heat. This is a great reliever after a long hard day or strenuous exercise. A hot bath, shower, heat lamp, warm whirlpool bath or sauna bath are all good ways to relax.

—Self-massage. This will loosen muscles and helps relax a localized area, such as your lower back or shoulder region. After a foot or leg massage, lie on the floor. Place your heels on the seat of a chair. In fact, it's a good idea to lie down after any massage. You're sure to fall asleep.

—Mild, rhythmic calistenics. Exercises with no jerking will relax you quickly.

—Gentle stretching. This is a fast way to loosen tight muscles and create a feeling of well-being.

—Breathing exercises.

When you're trying to relax, don't rely on pills to bring you happiness or peace of mind. Do get enough sleep to rebuild your energy; exercise some self-control to relax. When boredom bogs you down, put variety into your daily routine. When your work load seems overwhelming, remember some things can almost always be set aside until later.

Try to take things calmly; don't stew over a problem. Look for a time during your day or evening when you can take a few minutes away from people to lie down and rest. It helps to think quiet, pleasant thoughts and pretend all is right in the world. If you're a chronic rusher, slow down. And finally, a brisk walk outdoors after dinner or before going to bed should become a regular part of your life.

Dr. Edmund A. Jacobson has developed a simple method of instructing yourself to relax one set of muscles at a time until the entire body is quiet. For more details, see the fifth edition of his book, "You Must Relax," 1976. McGraw-Hill. $8.95.

Too many jobs ruin resume

It's Your Money

By Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — What's the worst thing to have on your resume when you're out looking for a job? Simply this: a history of too many jobs. To employers, that looks unreliable. Why hire and train you if you're soon going to get tired of your work and leave?

That fact comes from a survey of employers by National Personnel Associates, an association of 190 personnel agencies. It's an enormously useful piece of information to have.

Young people putting off a job commitment may think they can hop from place to place, under the guise of "gaining experience." The NPA survey tells you that that string will soon run out. Older people may think that rapid job changes enlarge their field of competence and make their records more attractive. But in the eyes of employers, it may simply raise doubts about your reliability.

"The person doing the job interviews usually has at least half a dozen resumes in hand," Charles Marks, director of NPA, told my associate, Anne Colamosca. "He often tries to reduce the number of applicants just by scanning." Under those circumstances, people with steady job histories are more likely to get interviews than people without.

The exact definition of a "job hopper" lies in the mind of the interviewer. Phil Fisher, president of the Association of Personnel Agencies in New York, describes him or her as someone who changes jobs more than once a year and often in unrelated fields.

But as you grow older, changing jobs every two or three years may also be a strike against you. Young managers can get away with a period of job hopping if it's clear that each change enlarges their responsibilities and moves them up the ladder. But after a while, it would look better if you stayed put and performed for a few years.

If you've already had a number of jobs and aren't happy with what you have now, you'll improve your employment prospects by sticking with it for a while longer. It would be especially helpful if you got promoted and did the new job well.

When you're stuck looking for work with a lot of short-term jobs on your record, there's one thing to do, says NPA's Marks: "List on your resume why you left each job, assuming that you had good reasons. That gives you a chance to explain and may open the door to an interview."

Another black mark on your record, says Marks, is to have had a job for five or six years with no promotion. This is particularly true in lower or middle-level management jobs. An employer worries that he's getting someone else's deadwood.

It's sudden death if you make an appointment for an interview and forget it, or make a change because you got your schedules confused.

One common problem, Fisher says, is that during the interview the applicant is too vague. Employers don't like that. You have to clarify in your own mind exactly what job it is that you want and why you qualify, then sell it to the interviewer. It often helps to make a list of your assets — with the help of a friend, if your own imagination runs dry too quickly. Another tip: be enthusiastic. A passive applicant turns an interviewer off.

On your resume, list not only what jobs you held but what you accomplished in them: how much the department grew, what projects you completed successfully, what ideas you set in motion, how many people you supervised. Evidence of accomplishment is tremendously important, even if the nature of the job means that the accomplishments are minor It shows you made a contribution rather than just followed the routine.

In the salary phase of the interview, start wih a general knowledge of what jobs of that type pay, so your request won't be way out of line. A lot of people lose jobs because of unrealistic salary expectations, Marks says. The employer expects to pay you a premium over your last salary, but not as much as he's paying more experienced people in the same department.

Power helps Lee handle problems

By Ken Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

Throw away those household tools. Throw away magic books on how to deceive audiences. Run out to the garage and start building a doghouse using only your hands.

Kun-Man Lee wouldn't advise doing any of the above, but he can get along without any tools as he hopes to show Lincolnites Saturday at 6 p.m. at Nebraska Wesleyan's Taylor Gym.

Lee, a 26-year martial arts expert, is someone you don't pick fights with.

A native of Seoul, South Korea, Lee, who now teaches martial arts in Lincoln, will be presenting martial arts demonstrations that include pounding nails with his bare hand, pulling the same nail out with his teeth, chopping off the top of a bottle with his hand and an assortment of judo throws and karate kicks.

"We hope to have eight to ten demonstrators here to show the different aspects of martial arts," said Lee, who teaches judo and tae kwan do in Lincoln.

"One demonstrator wants me to put three bicycle spokes through each of my forearms and says that I wouldn't bleed or feel any pain. I said he was crazy, but I'll try anything," he said.

"The whole purpose of the demonstrations is to exhibit the strength the human body has and to show that humans are almost limitless when it comes to strength," said Lee, a holder of a fifth degree judo black belt and a 6th degree black belt in tae kwan do.

"I don't want everybody, including my students, to run out and try to smash bricks with their hands or heads just because I can do it," said Lee. "It takes extreme concentration and long years of training in order to do these stunts.

"My father has the highest rank in judo in Korea and has been practicing for 60 years and still feels he has much to learn," said Lee.

Lee, who helped coach the 1972 U.S. Olympic judo team, and was the national coach in 1973, was trained in the martial arts by his father. "The whole family of two brothers and two sisters is involved in martial arts. My brother is the Olympic coach for El Salvador and won the world championship recently."

Tae-kwan-do, is a Korean equivalent of Karate, a Japanese sport, and Kung-Fu, the Chinese sport," said Lee. "The history of martial arts is colorful and dates back to 600 B.C. when people had to use sticks and hands to defend themselves.

"The sports of martial arts are growing in the U.S. and Americans won two or three silver and bronze medals in the recent world championships," said Lee.

"Besides learning to control your defense, you also control your body and mind with greater ease and confidence," said Lee. "If my students pick a fight they are thrown out of my school, but if somebody picks a fight they have the powers at their control to defend themselves."

The demonstrations will include Judo, tae kwan do, karate, Kendo, Nanchaku (sticks), canes and demonstrations of strength. .

Connie Perry thanks NU fans

Connie Perry didn't get much sleep the past few days. But she survived a tremendous period of pressure as she kept a vigil by her husband's bedside.

Connie's husband Tom, a linebacker for the Colorado Buffalos, suffered a severe head injury in the game against the Cornhuskers in Lincoln last Saturday.

She made it through the trying hours until he was taken off the critical list, Connie says, because of the many displays of kindness and gererosity shown by Nebraska football fans.

"I haven't had to worry about a thing except Tom," Connie said Tuesday when Cornhusker co-captains Greg Jorgensen and Jeff Carpenter presented her with a football autographed by every member of the Nebraska team.

"I've just been deluged by offers of assistance and help of every sort by Nebraska fans," the young Mrs. Perry repeated several times. "From the minute Tom got to the hospital in Lincoln and since he was brought here (NU Medical Center in Omaha). I've been given the red carpet treatment."

Connie, who watched the game from the Colorado student section, said the injury "was one of those freak, million-in-one things. They've watched the films over and over. He never received a hard jolt to the head. A vein burst in his head, but I'm convinced it was just one of those things that sometimes happens.

The helmet Tom was wearing has been checked out," Mrs. Perry says. "It was the best and most expensive kind made. The helmet is cushioned by a series of little water bags. They didn't burst. And they would have, had he taken a hard blow to the head."

Connie says her husband did get kicked in the leg on one play near the goal line in the fourth quarter. He was taken to the sidelines for one play.

"Tom was demanding to be put back in," she recalls. "He didn't think he was hurt bad enough to leave even for the one play. The doctors checked him over and let him go back in."

Colorado coach Bill Mallory says the Saturday night ordeal of emergency surgery in Lincoln and a five-hour operation in Omaha was "a scary experience. I guarantee you it's scary when you rush to the hospital and one of your players is fighting for his life."

Mallory, like Perry's wife, is thankful for the attention shown. "I can't say enough about the fantastic job all the doctors did," the CU coach adds. "They opened up the left side of his skull and had to probe for the clotting. They found one clot at the base of his skull and another on the right side of the skull. He was bleeding a great deal — he required six pints of blood."

Mallory had a similar scare earlier in the season when Colorado tailback Mike Kozlowski punctured his lung in a game. Two years ago, reserve defensive back Polie Poitier collapsed during a practice and later died from causes linked to sickle cell anemia.

"I pray to God we don't ever have anything like this happen again," Mallory said.

Connie Perry says she and Mallory's wife "kept each other going through the critical period of this." Mrs. Mallory returned to Colorado after Tom was declared on the road to recovery.

"It's been the prayers and concern of the football fans that have sustained me and brought Tom through this," she adds. "I hope you'll thank them all for me."

Fans writing to Osborne

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

While there was a considerable release of tension among Nebraska fans following Saturday's win over Colorado, no one probably emitted a bigger sigh of relief than Tom Osborne's mailman.

Chatting with sportswriters following Tuesday's practice, Osborne indicated he would never have to worry about joining the Lonely Hearts Club. He receives volumes of mail, especially after a Nebraska defeat.

"It (mail) was pretty heavy after the Iowa State game," said Osborne of the 24-21 loss to the Cyclones. "There's not as much this week."

Most letters are from Monday morning quarterbacks convinced they have the proper solution or a genius idea which will surely bring another national championship to Lincoln.

Osborne said one writer after the Iowa State loss wondered why freshman middle guard Curt Hineline was not promoted to the varsity. The correspondent was convinced Hineline, who is from Bellevue, Wash., could hve stopped Iowa State's running game.

"Hineline's a good player," said Osborne of the 6-2, 220-pound frosh who had a fine game against the Iowa State junior varsity. "But Weinmaster (Nebraska's starting middle guard) along with Wightman, (linebacker James) played as well as anyone against Iowa State.

"People don't realize that it's not just the middle guard's job to stop the run up the middle."

Other suggestions Osborne received included throwing the ball more and giving I-back Richard Berns more opportunities to carry the ball.

"No one seemed too dissatisfied that Isaiah (Hipp) ran the ball 25 times," Osborne said. "We'd have to have the ball 100 plays to run everyone that often."

Noting he found many of the letters he receives amusing, Osborne admitted it's hard to swallow all of the ideas, considering the amount of time he and his staff work each football season.

"I think it would be ludicrous for me to walk into someone's business, look around a little bit and then start suggesting who I think should be fired," Osborne said. "The owner of that business probably spends 12-14 hours a day on the job. As coaches, we are spending 16 hours a day here."

Turning to Saturday's game with Oklahoma State in Stillwater, a game Nebraska has been established as a six-point favorite, Osborne was asked if the news that the game would be regionally televised had added any extra excitment to his team.

"Don Bryant (NU sports information director) called from Oklahoma today and said there is a tremendous amount of enthusiasm at Oklahoma State because of television," Osborne said. "They (OSU officials) feel it will give them a chance to showcase Terry Miller (OSU running back) and help his chances for the Heisman Trophy.

"I'm sure our players are pleased about it. But they have been on television once this year against Alabama and will be on again against Oklahoma. It always helps in recruiting."

Noting ABC-TV still interviews the coaches at halftime, Osborne said he thought that idea was "silly. But they (ABC) like it, so it's one of those things you have to put up with to be on TV."

The Husker coach said the television people are building the game up as a personal showdown between OSU's Miller and Nebraska's Hipp. "BUt Isaiah is just looking at it as an opportunity to win a football game," he said.

Nebraska officials said ABC announcer Jim Lampley will spend Wednesday in Lincoln interviewing Hipp, as a special pre-game program will center on Hipp and Miller.

Offensive guard Steve Lindquist (leg), linebacker James Wightman (knee), and fullback Monte Anthony (neck) were still slowed by injuries during Tuesday workout. Starting defensive tackle Rod Horn left the workout early with a twisted knee that Osborne said did not appear serious.

There was one new face in the starting defensive lineup. Jeff Pullen had reclaimed a Black Shirt from Weinmaster at middle guard. Defensive coordinator Lance Van Zandt said he has not decided who will start Saturday at the middle guard slot.

In the weekly football polls, Nebraska climbed a few notches after its 33-15 victory over Colorado. United Press International had the Huskers ranked No. 10, while Associated Press put Nebraska in the No. 12 spot.

Lincolnites want Ryan win

Lincoln Pius X can join Lincoln East and Lincoln High in hopes that Omaha Westside stumbles against Class B Omaha Ryan Friday night.

The three Lincoln schools have more than a casual interest in seeing Ryan come out on top. It could mean a state playoff berth for two of the three.

With Westside a contender for a Class A wild card berth ahead of Lincoln High and East, it's easy to see why either Links' coach Larry Frost of Spartans' coach Lee Zentic would like to see the Warriors lose.

A Westside loss would enhance the chances of the winner of Friday's LHS-East game receiving a wild card.

Where does Pius X fit in?

A Westside loss is almost vital to the Thunderbolts in a quest for a Class B wild card.

Should Ryan lose to Westside, Ryan would remain a loser under the Nebraska School Activities Assn. point standings, costing Pius X five points since the 'Bolts played Ryan.

If a combination of things happen — Ryan wins, Fairbury beats Superior and Council Bluffs St. Albert's beats Omaha Cathedral — Pius could finish with a 41.2-point-average, possibly good enough to make the playoffs.

However, Minden, with a season-ending win over Central City, stands to move into the leading position with a 42.2 average if Whippet opponents Ogallala and Aurora both finish with wins. If just one wins, Minden would still finish ahead of Pius with a 41.6. If both lose, Minden would then finish 41.1, below Pius' best finish.

Should one of Pius' three variables lose, Pius would then finish 40.6. If two of the three lose, the average would dip to 40.0.

Chief wild card contenders are:

Blair — Has possible finishes of 41.6, 41.1 and 40.5, pending the outcome of opponents Plattsmouth and Elkhorn, providing Blair beats Missouri Valley Friday.

McCook — Should the Bison lose to Lexington Friday, McCook stands to pick up a wild card with possible point averages of 42.7 and 41.1.

Central City — Central City must beat Minden, and then could finish with a 40.0 if Grand Island Central Catholic and Aurora win.

Gering — With the season over and equipment checked in, Gering could still finish 41.1 if Kimball beats unbeaten Yuma, Colo., Ogallala beats Holdrege and Gordon beats Crawford.

Cowboys please Stanley

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State coach Jim Stanley Tuesday expressed delight with his team's lack of injuries for the second straight week, and also praised the Cowboys performance in a 30-minute contract drill.

"We had a real good workout," Stanley said. "This is the first time in a month we've had everyone healthy. Maybe that was the reason. But we had a great practice, a great attitude and I think we accomplished some very important things."

The workout was highlighted by 30 minutes of contact work which gave Stanley a look at the Cowboy playbook for Saturday's televised game with Nebraska.

"Right now, we don't have a number one quarterback," the coach said. "Randy Stephenson and Harold Bailey are too good to put one in front of the other. They both looked good today. We've got the rest of the week to decide and we'll go with the one whose moving the team the best."

In looking at anticipated Nebraska pass routes, Stanley praised his defensive secondary for its improvement.

"I thought we got into our drop areas much quicker today. Now we've got to start reacting to the ball better."

Stanley also cited linebackers John Corker and Larry Jackson for, "keeping things stirred up in the middle drill."

Horsemen eye Sunday racing

Providence, R.I. (UPI) — People who make their living by racing horses have warned Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy's opposition to Sunday gambling could send 1,000 workers to the welfare lines and kill an industry that fattens the tax coffers.

Officials of Narragansett Park and spokesmen for its horsemen, jockeys and union workers pleaded their cases Monday before the state Racing Commission.

The panel today continued deliberations on a request for a four-day weekly schedule with 11-race cards on Friday and Monday nights and on Saturday and Sunday afternoons at the Pawtucket oval.

"Racing has provided jobs for thousands and $300 million in tax revenues over the last 40 years and it shouldn't be allowed to die because a lot of people would be hurt," said Thomas Croce Jr, secretary-treasurer of the Rhode Island Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association.

"Governor Garrahy can save 1,000 jobs simply by approving Sunday racing," Croce said. Garrahy, a Roman Catholic, said last week he would never permit Sunday betting while he is governor.

George Koury, business manager of the clerks union, said Garrahy should crack down on "bingo games and other church-related events" if he really wants to wipe out gambling on Sundays.

"I'm as religious as the next guy, but our society has changed in the last 20 years," Koury said. "If the barriers against other sports on Sunday have been lifted, why should they remain against horse racing?"

Stephen Achilles, the track's lawyer, said officials would appeal to the courts if the Sunday racing request is denied. He said the track owners spent $450,000 renovating the track.

Dependable Scribner runner Pribnow honored

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

A back averaging 32 carries a game was willing to give a little more than that last week.

Scribner's Jeff Pribnow doesn't mind the physical beating, especially when the reward is something like his team's 25-6 win over Tekamah-Herman.

Pribnow carried 36 times, rushed for 159 yards and scored all four Scribner touchdowns as the Trojans ended Tekamah's 18-game winning streak.

The senior I-back earns the Sunday Journal and Star Athlete of the Week award for the sterling performance.

Pribnow hardly sneaked up on the Tekamah defense. He's rushed for 100-plus yards in each of Scribner's eight games this fall and now owns 1,159 yards, entering the season finale at Dodge Friday night.

He flashed his versatility against Tekamah, returning an interception 65 yards for a touchdown to go with an 8-yard scoring run, staking Scribner to a 12-0 first quarter cushion.

Pribnow had a two-yard TD run in the third quarter and iced Scribner's fifth victory with a 10-yard scoring gallop in the fourth quarter.

He also was credited with eight tackles and several pass deflections. Scribner had been the last team to inflict a loss on Tekamah, 8-7, late in the 1975 season.

Others earning Athlete of the Week recognition include:

Delwyn Hennings, Crofton — He repeated as Class C state cross country champion at Kearney, leading the Warriors to the team championship by a whopping 58 points.

Doug Spellman, Creighton Prep — Senior defensive back, who's been fighting a chronic ankle injury all fall, thwarted two Papillion threats in team's sixth shutout as Papio was last to fall from Class A unbeaten ranks, 7-0. Spellman intercepted a pass in his own end zone in the opening minutes of the game and swiped another on the Prep 15-yard line early in the fourth period.

Paul Knight, Ogallala — Rushed for 249 yards and scored two touchdowns in Indians' 26-21 win over Gothenburg. The senior who now has 961 yards rushing for the season capped the night by being named homecoming king.

Dave Croghan, Wahoo — With injuries sidelining two backs, split end was moved to running back and responded with 122 yards rushing on 22 carries and scored eight points as team ended a 19-game losing streak. Wahoo had only two wins in its previous 52 games.

Brad Tittel, Alliance — Besides having played an outstanding defensive game, he kicked a 20-yard field goal on game's final play to upset Class B's No. 1-rated McCook, 3-0, at McCook.

Jack Smith, Grand Island — Senior linebacker, 6-1, 200, recovered a fumble on Lincoln Northeast's four-yard line, paving the way to one touchdown and recovered a fumbled punt in the final three minutes to complete Islanders' 15-13 triumph over Lincoln Northeast. It was GI's third win over a Lincoln school this season.

Career ends for Fischer?

Washington (AP) — Veteran cornerback Pat Fisher, troubled all year with a lower back problem, was placed on the injured-reserve list by the Washington Redskins Tuesday, putting him out of action for the rest of the season and probably ending his long professional football career.

To fill the 37-year-old Fischer's slot on the roster, the Redskins signed defensive back Windlan Hall, formerly with the Minnesota Vikings, off the waiver list.

Fischer underwent a myelogram test at Georgetown University Monday to determine what is wrong with his back, which kept him out of action for nearly all the preseason and required him to be hospitalized and placed in traction.

A Redskins' spokesman said the results of the examination indicated he suffered from the same problem which caused him to undergo an operation following the 1971 season, a slipped disk, but on the other side. He will probably require another operation.

After missing the season opener, Fischer played well against Atlanta and St. Louis to bring his 17-year total of NFL games played in to 212.

Coming back to practice after the St. Louis game, his troubles began again. The ailment affected the lower part of his left leg as well as the hip area.

Fischer's cornerback slot has been filled by Gerard Williams, a second year man out of Langston.

Hall, 27, attended Arizona State. He was a fourth round choice by San Francisco in 1972 and was traded to Minnesota in 1976.

He is listed primarily as a safety, but he did play cornerback on occasion and will be used there by the Redskins.

Fischer was a 17th round draft pick in 1961 by St. Louis after playing collegiately at Nebraska. He signed with the Redskins as a free agent in 1968 after playing out his option with the Cardinals.

He had played in 210 games coming into the 1977 season, more than any other cornerback in NFL history.

Kansas City closed to within five points at 105-100 on two consecutive field goals by rookie Otis Birdsong with 2:24 left in the game. But Philadelphia's Julius Erving sank a layup and Henry Bibby tallied with a long jumper to make it 109-100 with 1:52 left.

Huskers pace loop offenses

Kansas City (AP) — The Nebraska Cornhuskers have their first breakaway backfield threat since the days of Johnny Rodgers, and it's beginning to show.

The Huskers, with sophomore sensation I. M. Hipp in the van, overhauled Colorado this week to lead all Big Eight teams in total offense.

Nebraska now leads with an average of 416 yards per game, followed by Colorado, 404, and Oklahoma State, 380.6.

Oklahoma State maintained its lead in rushing offense, with an average of 299. But Nebraska jumped into second place, due mainly to Hipp, at 295.1.

Kansas State, which has lost 17 straight Big Eight games, has moved into the lead in passing offense with a game average of 135.9 yards. Colorado dropped to runnerup at 133.4.

The Buffs, barely, held on to their scoring lead, averaging 29 points per outing. But Oklahoma trails by only one-tenth of a point.

In total defense, Iowa State and Oklahoma are far outdistancing the others. Iowa State is allowing an average of 270.1 yards and Oklahoma 272.3.

Despite facing Oklahoma's powerful ground game last week, the Cyclones retained their lead in rushing defense, surrendering an average of 147.7. Oklahoma is second at 162.4.

Colorado, despite its loss last week to Nebraska, still leads in scoring defense with an average of 13 points each Saturday. Missouri made a big jump to second, at 15.3. Strangely, Missouri is last in the league in total defense, averaging 351.4 yards given up.

Kansas remains the leader in pass defense. The Jayhawks' average of 95.6 yards per game is exactly 10 yards better than runnerup Colorado.

Smoker set Friday night

Local amateur golden gloves boxing opens its season Friday night at the Nebraska East Campus Activities Building at 8 p.m. when the NU club hosts a 15-bout smoker.

Randy Nelsen, second year coach of the NU club, said that two Lincoln clubs, two Omaha clubs, Columbus, Fremont, Central City, and Hastings would be participating in the meet in the building two blocks north of Valentino's on Holdrge.

"We have some top boxers on our NU team this year and should have some top contenders in the districts and possibly the nationals," said Nelsen, who coached the Easterday team for five years.

Midwest champion Lawrence Eisneros and district champions Clark Schmidt and Pat Arthur, plus some nel boxers comprise the UNL club. Cisneros will face Carlos Santistevan in the featured bout.

"We've been working out in the Schramm Hall basement every night and it'll be good to get back in the ring," said Nelsen.

"We'll have three heavyweight bouts and that's always a good attraction in any smoker," said Nelsen.

Hole-in-one

Lloyd Wilkinson used a five-iron to score a hole-in-one on the par three, 170-yard 14th hole at Mahoney Park Monday.

Wilkinson's ace was witnessed by Dick Gettemy, Dale Bird and Dean Boling.

Lyle snares Young award

New York (AP) — Sparky Lyle of the New York Yankees, who has never started a game in 11 major league seasons, became the first American League relief pitcher to win the Cy Young Award.

In balloting released Tuesday by the Baseball Writers Association of America, Lyle picked up 56½ points to top Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles, a previous three-time winner, who had 48 points. Strikeout king Nolan Ryan of the California Angels finished third with 46 points, followed by Dennis Leonard of the Kansas City Royals, who had 45.

The left-handed Lyle, whose 201 career saves are a major league record, received nine first-place votes, three for second and 2½ votes for third place. That gave him his total of 56½ points under the system which awards five points for first, three for second and one for third.

Lyle, 33, led the Yankees to the AL East title for the second straight year with a 13-5 record, 26 saves and a league-leading 2.17 earned run average. His victories in Games 4 and 5 of the AL playoffs against Kansas City sent the World Champion Yankees into the World Series, where he picked up the opening-game victory against Los Angeles.

A total of six pitchers received first-place votes from the 28-man BBWAA committee, but Lyle's nine were the most. Palmer, 20-11, and Ryan, 19-16 with 341 strikeouts, each received six first-place votes. Leonard, 20-12, had five, Goltz, 20-11, had one and Bill Campbell, Boston's relief ace, also had one.

Nine pitchers received votes, none of them getting recognition on all 28 ballots. Lyle, in fact, was not mentioned on 13 ballots. No other Cy Young Award winner had ever been left off 13 ballots.

The only other bullpen ace to win a Cy Young Award was Mike Marshall, who won the National League's trophy while pitching for the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1974.

Lyle, whose special and almost exclusive pitch is a hard slider, has two years left on a three-year contract. He holds the all-time record for a pure relief performer with 621 appearances.

During the past two seasons, Lyle has had a hand in 35 per cent of the Yankees' victories, winning 20 games and saving 49 others.

Lyle is the third Yankee to win the Cy Young Award, which was instituted by the BBWAA in 1955. Bob Turley took the prize in 1958 and Whitey Ford won it in 1961.

Braves manager Bristol is fired

Atlanta (UPI) — Dave Bristol, only the second of eight Braves managers to survive two full seasons since the baseball team moved to Atlanta in 1966, was washed overboard Tuesday in the wake of back-to-back last-place finishes.

General Manager Bill Lucas immediately offered the fiery, 44-year-old Bristol a job as his special assistant, but Bristol insisted he wanted to stay in uniform and would seek employment elsewhere even though the Braves offered to pay him for the remaining year of his current contract.

"I've been a manager on the field, in uniform, for 12 years and want to continue to do that," Bristol said when he dropped by Atlanta Stadium to clean out his desk. "I'll probably contact other teams and see what's available."

Bristol, who also managed at Cincinnati (1966-69) and Milwaukee (1970-72), indicated he would be interested in a coaching job if no one wants him as a manager. "I might have to take it to stay in uniform," he said.

Bristol served as a coach at Montreal after being fired by Milwaukee and before being hired by the Braves to succeed Connie Ryan, who managed the final 27 games of the 1975 season as successor to Clyde King.

The only Atlanta manager to last more than two full seasons was Luman Harris (1968-72) although Eddie Mathews, who succeeded Harris for the last third of the 1972 season, managed two-thirds of the way through the 1974 season before getting the axe.

Lucas said the Braves board of directors decided at a Monday night meeting to make a managerial change and notified him of that decision Tuesday morning. Lucas said he then contacted Bristol.

Lucas said a list of managerial candidates would be compiled and that a successor would be named "as soon as possible."

Dave Bristol
. . . loses job

Bristol said he heard talk Saturday that he might be fired and called Lucas to ask to attend the board meeting. He said Lucas agreed and notified him Monday night that the board, which actually met Monday night, would meet Tuesday.

Bristol insisted just a few days ago that he would manage Atlanta again in 1978 even though the Braves lost 90 games in 1976 and then lost 101 this past season — the first time since 1935 they had lost as many as 100 games.

Lucas reportedly had been in favor of letting Bristol finish out the remaining year of his three-year contract as manager, but several board members pressed for his dismissal.

Braves owner Ted Turner, the renowned yachtsman who won the America's Cup this summer, declined comment on the matter because he is still under a year's suspension handed down by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for comments he made relative to the signing of free agent Gary Matthews.

But it is doubtful that any such action could have been taken without Turner's approval.

Rushing lead to Alexander

Mission, Kan. (UPI) — Charles Alexander has become a one-man offensive machine for Louisiana State as he ranks first in both rushing and scoring this week in the NCAA Division I statistics.

Alexander has rushed for 949 yards in six games for a 158.2 average and has scored 68 points on the strength of 11 touchdowns. He leads Earl Campbell of Texas in rushing by an average of nine yards per game, and he leads Joel Payton of Ohio State in scoring by six points.

Terry Miller of Oklahoma State dropped to third in rushing this week, the lowest he's been all year, despite a 149-yard performance against Kansas. He is the nation's only Division I ball carrier to have gained 1,000 yards this season, but his per game average is only 149.0.

Injured Gifford Nielson of Brigham Young has been supplanted as the Division I passing leader for the first time this season by Stanford's Guy Benjamin, who has completed .657 percent of his passes for 1,702 yards and three touchdowns. Purdue freshman Mark Herrmann, who ranks second, continues to lead the nation in passing yardage with 1,858.

UNO spikers seek revenge

Omaha — Revenge will be on the minds of many University of Nebraska at Omaha volleyball players Wednesday night when the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and Kansas State University travel to the UNO Fieldhouse.

UNO and K-State battle at 7 p.m., while the Mavs prepare for the 8 p.m. showdown with the Lady Huskers.

NU drubbed the Lady Mavs, 15-2, 15-0, two weeks ago in the Husker Invitational, and the Wildcats clawed UNO, 15-5, 15-4, Sept. 30. Both were road losses.

NU women facing tests

The Nebraska varsity volleyball team and the cross country team will be on the road this weekend while the gymnastics team will open its season with an intersquad meet.

The volleyball team, now 20-7, will be in Norman, Okla., for the Big Eight Championships. The Huskers will defend their Big Eight title.

NU coach Terry Pettit said "It's easier for Nebraska volleyball fans to relate to the Big Eight then any other event. We're the defending league champs and if you were to ask the girls, I think they'd tell you they expect to repeat that."

Pettit said the team is playing its best volleyball of the year right now. The Huskers beat a strong Chicago-Circle team last week. "Chicago-Circle mauled us at Madison earlier in the year," Pettit said, "so I was really pleased we could upset them. They were the second-seeded team in our pool.

Carol Frost's cross country team will travel to Fairbury this weekend for the Southeast Community College Invitational at 11:30 a.m. Saturday at the East Ridge Country Club.

Frost said teams from Wichita State, Kearney State, Cloud County Junior College, Nebraska and possibly runners from other schools will compete in the meet.

NU head gymnastics coach July Schalk will send her gymnasts through an intersquad meet Thursday at 4 p.m. in room 123 at Mable Lee Hall. Schalk said the meet will be in preparation for the team's opener on Nov. 5 at Minnesota.

Schalk has five returning gymnasts and three newcomers. Leading the team will be all-arounder Crissy Robertson, who Schalk will depend upon for her consistency. Junior Peggy Liddick has also added some higher level moves to her routines which will make her more competitive in the all-around event.

Newcomers Patty Carmichael and Jeanne Concannon will add depth to the all-around team. Carmichael, a former elite gymnast from Pennsylvania, is a sophomore transfer from the University of Illinois. Concannon is a freshman from Colorado Springs. She has aerial moves on the balance beam and will spark the bars team with her performances.

Others on the team include Tammy Driscoll (all-around), Sandy Czaplewski (balance beam), Carrie Buckley (uneven bars) and Katie Vogel (uneven bars).

'Ringer' horse at Belmont

New York (AP) — The horse who won the ninth race at Belmont Park and paid $116 was a "ringer," the New York Racing Association and the New York State Racing and Wagering Board said Tuesday.

Two men have been suspended by the board and criminal action could follow.

On Sept. 23 at Belmont a horse identified as Lebon, a 4-year-old who had been at best mediocre in racing in Uruguay, easily won the ninth race. But the winner turned out to be Cinzano, a stakes winner in Uruguay who reportedly had been destroyed after being injured on a Long Island farm. Insurance of $150,000 already had been paid.

"Photographs received this afternoon from Uruguay confirmed that Lebon was not the correct horse," said Ogden Mills Phipps, chairman of the board of the NYRA, operator of Belmont Park.

William G. Barry, chairman of racing and wagering board, said owner-trainer Jack Morgan and Dr. Mark Gerard, a practicing and licensed veterinarian in New York had been suspended. He said the suspension was based on wrong identication, heavy betting—one unidentified better collected $87,000 on the race—and the question of insurance. The insurance company which paid off was not identified.

Barry also said that part of the matter—he did not elaborate—was being turned over to the Nassau County district attorney's office and that FBI has been asked to investigate insurance fraud.

Morgan and Gerard have 30 days to ask the board for a hearing, Barry said.

The two horses were shipped here from Uruguay, with Dr. Gerard acting as purchasing agent, and after quarantine were taken to Dr. Gerard's farm in Muttontown, N.Y. There Cinzano reportedly suffered a fractured skull, was destroyed and carcas disposed of.

The horse identified as Lebon, but actually Cizano, ran out of the money in his first start at Belmont, then won Sept. 23 and then ran out again at the Meadowlands in New Jersey.

A photograph of "Lebon" in the winner's circle that appeared in a Montivideo newspaper, apparently touched off the investigation.

The bettor who won the $87,000 by betting to win was not identified but "we have a good idea who it was," said Phipps. He added the bettor held none of the 14 trifecta tickets on the race, which were worth $29,855 each, and that 11 of those tickets were sold in city Off-Track betting shops.

Horses in the United States carry lip tatoos, but horses from Uruguay do not have this identiying mark and foal certificates are used fo. identification, an NYRA spokesman said, adding both horses had similar physical markings.

"I thought he was just a horse that woke up on the grass," said Larry Adams who rode the winner of the "phony" race which was run on the turf. "I didn't ride him the first time, when he ran on the dirt."

So you think you know football?

Each Tuesday The Lincoln Star brings it readers a football rules interpretation problem in which the correct answer varies within the respective framework of the High School Federation, the NCAA and the NFL.

Today's example:

Team A has the ball, 4th down and 9 at B's 35-yard line. A's punter kicks the ball very high and it is coming down in the vicinity of B's 5-yard line. All B players in the area retreat 5-10 yards from the area and make no attempt to catch the ball.

A's left end runs under the ball, catches it in flight and downs it at B's 4-yard line.

What would you rule?

H.S. Federation — Fair catch interference — B has the choice of taking the ball 1st and 10 at their own 4-yard line or penalize A for the interference. The penalty would be 15 yards from the previous line of scrimmage making it 4th down and 24 at the 50-yard line. High school rules do not allow the punting team to touch or catch the ball prior to its contact with the ground. Any violation is fair catch interference.

NCAA — No foul — B's ball 1st and 10 at its own 4-yard line. NCAA rules allow the punting team to catch the ball as long as it doesn't interfere with the receiving team's opportunity to make a catch.

NFL — No foul. Ruling is essentially the same as the NCAA's.

25 unbeatens could make grid playoffs

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

Keep your fingers crossed, prep football playoff fans. Of the 27 unbeaten teams remaining in Nebraska, it appears at least 25 will qualify for next week's palyoffs, if they avoid a loss this week.

Norfolk Catholic in Class C-1 and Wilsonville in eight-man could be the unbeatens on the outside, looking in when the regular season smoke clears.

Even if Norfolk Catholic whips unbeaten Battle Creek in its regular season finale, the Knights could lose the district 3 point championship to twice-beaten Emerson-Hubbard.

Wilsonville is destined for a back seat finish in eight-man's district 5 behind state leader Wheatland. Wilsonville, however, might be considered an underdog in its regular season finale against Bartley.

So the Nebraska School Activities Assn. (NSAA) expanded and revised formula stands a good chance of qualifying all teams making it through the regular season unbeaten.

That would be decidedly different from last season when 10 unbeatens failed to qualify for the playoffs — Adams, Ansley, Battle Creek, Bennington, Cambridge, Gordon, Hebron, Lyman, Pleasanton and Trumbull.

Here are the unbeatens which appear playoff-bound next Tuesday:

Class B — Arlington, Chadron, Hastings Agams Central, Pierce and Schuyler.

Class C-1 — Bayard, Centennial, Gibbon, Hebron and Elkhorn Mt. Michael.

Class C-2 — Ansley, Nebraska City Lourdes and Orchard.

Class D — Axtell, Bancroft, Greeley, Nelson and St. Edward.

Eight-man — Adams, Beemer, Eustis, Hampton, Potter, Trumbull and Wheatland.

The eight-team playoff fields, which will include two wild card entries in each of six classes, will solve most of the inequities bugging the first two years of the playoffs.

Some of the credit, too, must go to the revised point formula, breaking point values into three levels for winners and losers instead of two.

The wild card could bring five of the unbeatens into the playoffs. Those in line to use that route at this point are Bayard, Elkhorn Mt. Michael, Greeley, Hampton and Eustis.

Defending state C-1 champion Tekamah-Herman is another likely qualifier via the wild card after the Tigers tripped for the first time last week against Scribner.

That means a C-1 showdown between Hebron and Tekamah-Herman could materialize as a first round matchup next Tuesday.

"The way we have it figured, if we beat Henderson Wednesday and Scribner beats Dodge, we'll play Tekamah in the first round," Hebron coach Les Hill said Monday.

The bliss of the wild card obviously applies to more than unbeaten teams.

Ali to meet Ledoux in 5-rounder

Chicago (UPI) — Heavyweight Scott Ledoux, who fought a 10 round draw with olympic champion Leon Spinks last Saturday, was named Tuesday to meet heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali in a five-round charity exhibition bout Dec. 2.

Doug Demmings also was announced as one of the fighters for a 15-round U.S. championship middleweight bout to be held on the same card. His opponent will be named later.

Another 15-round U.S. title bout is being scheduled with two welterweights still to be selected.

Ledoux said he expected to earn a title chance against Ali by making a good showing against the champion in the exhibition contest, which will feature $100 black tie and champagne seats.

Dow Ind. -0.78

New York (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average scraped against the 800 level for the first time in more than two years Tuesday as the stock market recorded its third straight loss.

The Dow average of 30 blue chips slipped into the 790s for most of the session, but rallied just before the close to finish at 801.54, down .78 for the day.

The average last closed below 800 at 794.55 on Oct. 2, 1975.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index, meanwhile, sank below the 50 level for the first time since early January of last year with a .38 drop to 49.86.

Losers swamped gainers by close to a 4-1 margin in the broad tally on the NYSE.

In the past two sessions the Dow had fallen 12.48 points.

Analysts said the market continued to suffer from concern over rising interest rates, weakness in the dollar, and disagreement between the White House and the Federal Reserve over the Fed's tightening of credit.

After the close the Fed announced a quarter-point increase to 6 per cent in the discount rate—the rate it charges on loans to its member commercial banks.

Analysts also noted selling Tuesday by followers of the so-called Dow Theory, which flashed a negative signal Monday when the Dow Jones industrial and transportation averages simultaneously reached new lows for the year.

But buying began to show up in the final minutes of the session in such depressed blue-chip issues as Eastman Kodak, which showed a 1⅛ gain at 53¾ as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE; Du Pont, up 1 at 109, and International Paper, ahead ¾ at 40.

Technical analysts say the Dow 795-800 range stands as an important test for the market not only because of the psychological weight a round number like 800 can carry.

They also note that it represents the halfway point in the advance the average posted from a low of 577 in late 1974 to its recovery peak of 1,014 in September 1976.

Houston Oil & Minerals, the most active American Stock Exchange issue, dropped 1⅜ to 27¼.

Media trends distrub CBS news executive

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

The director of news for the CBS television network describes himself as a misanthrope: "I always get someone mad at me."

And, on Tuesday night, William J. Small, cigar in hand, barbs in tongue, told other journalists assembled at the Hilton Hotel of the disturbing trends he sees in the media.

"I do find it disturbing that papers are groping with style and neglecting or diminishing the central core of what newspapers are all about," he said.

For Small, newspapers should be about gethering news — information to help citizens form opinions about their government.

"The majority give less national and international news than you get from Walter Cronkite," he said.

Small supervises the CBS Morning News and the CBS Evening News, a 24-minute broadcast which he says features "front-page stories."

He spoke Tuesday evening at a meeting of the Sigma Delta Chi, Society of Professional Journalists in the Hilton Hotel.

He also addressed a "Town and Gown Breakfast" Wednesday co-sponsored by the University of Nebraska College of Arts and Sciences and the Lincoln Town and Gown Committee.

He criticized "soft-core" coverages taking aim at gossip columns ("The great discovery of 1976-77") and newspaper publisher Rupert Murdock, the "Australian whiz kid" who has discovered ways to make "the New York Post worse."

He said there is a "scourge across the land" among local broadcast stations to hire consultants who tell stations how to improve broadcasts and boast their ratings.

"The first thing they tell their stations is to fire the weatherman," he said. "Then they tell you to hire the type of fellows who look good in your community. They look like they all have the same barber."

But, he added, he senses that some stations are aiming toward a saner approach to news.

He criticized Supreme Court decisions which he thinks have limited First Amendment rights to the broadcasting profession.

He says the profession does not have much public support: "The average guy looks upon us as something he has to tolerate."

Small also said the networks have agreed to film proceedings on the Senate floor at no cost to taxpayers. But reaction among senators to allowing cameras into Congress is mixed, he said.

Some senators want to control their image, Small said. He senses that some might not want the public to see a common sight in Washington — an empty Senate chamber.

Judge writes of his 'repugnance'

Sebring, Fla. (AP) — The judge who sentenced a 16-year-old boy to death for murdering an elderly woman in a $6 robbery says the enormity of the crime overcame his reluctance to have a teen-ager executed.

"The idea of a teen-ager being executed by the state immediately invokes a natural feeling of repugnance and aversion," Circuit Court Judge Clifton M. Kelly said in his order sentencing Frank A. Ross Jr. of DeSoto City.

"But there is a still greater feeling of repugnance and aversion when you consider that a helpless, wholly innocent, 64-year-old woman who was living alone in her own home was brutally killed," the judge wrote in his decision Monday.

A jury had convicted Ross of first-degree murder last February. He was tried for the death of Helen Dixon, 64, of Avon Park, during a robbery last Nov. 15.

After a separate hearing on the penalty, the same jury deliberated only 17 minutes Monday before recommending the death penalty instead of life in prison.

Judge Kelly said he would forward the sentence to the Florida Supreme Court for the review that is automatic in Florida death penalty cases.

Another Florida execution sentence, that of John A. Spenkelink, has been stayed by a federal appeals court until it resolves challenges to Florida's death penalty law.

Ross was charged along with another DeSoto City youth, James E. Wells, 17, who was adjudged guilty Aug. 12 after a separate trial. Kelly sentenced Wells to life in prison.

Both boys testified during the trial that they had gone to look at a car offered for sale by Mrs. Dixon.

Wells testified that Ross knocked the woman down, kicked her and took the money.

Baby with pacemaker is improving

St. Petersburg, Fla. (AP) — Lesley Nelson, who had a pacemaker implanted in her chest when she was just 2½ hours old, has been taken off the critical list at the age of 2 weeks.

Doctors at All Children's Hospital said Tuesday that the baby's condition was upgraded to fair.

"She's sleeping less and fussing more and that's a very good sign," said a hospital spokesman. "The baby is doing well."

Lesley was born to James and Sharon Nelson of Fort Wayne, Ind., on Oct. 11. Even before she was born doctors knew the baby would need a pacemaker because her heartbeat was too slow. It was 40 beats per minute and should have been at least 120.

Dr. George Diacoff, a friend of Mrs. Nelson's obstetrician, agreed to perform the delicate surgery. He implanted an experimental, long-term pacemaker that can be adjusted by a computer hookup from outside the chest.

Officials said the device should last 10 years.

A hospital spokesman said it's not yet known when Lesley could go home.

Social Security for bureaucrats meets opposition

Washington (AP) — The Carter administration announced Tuesday it opposes bringing the seven million federal, state and local government workers under the Social Security system.

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph A. Califano said in a letter to every member of the House that the administration wants the pending House bill on Social Security to be amended to leave the government workers out of Social Security.

Participation in the Social Security system is now optional for the government workers, and federal employes have lobbied hard to keep it that way.

The issue is expected to come to the House floor Wednesday in a vote on an amendment by Rep. Joseph L. Fisher, D-Va. The Fisher amendment would remove from the bill a provision extending Social Security to government workers.

"The administration supports the amendment to be offered by Rep. Fisher," Califano said.

The Fisher amendment would eliminate mandatory coverage of government employes and instead authorize a study of ways to integrate these other retirement systems with Social Security.

Crime doesn't pay, especially if you argue

Minneapolis (AP) — When you're engaged in team-work burglary it doesn't pay to have arguments on the job.

A pair of burglars apparently got into an argument while breaking into an apartment in Mineapolis and gunfire ensued, police said.

As a result, one burglar is in custody and the other is wounded, but still at large.

Authorities said they were called to an apartment building after receiving a report of gunfire. They found one suspect in the building and later found several stolen television sets in his car.

The other suspect apparently fled on foot, although wounded. Police said they weren't sure what caused the argument.

Van driver slightly injured in mishap at 27th and Cornhusker

The driver of a van escaped with minor injuries when her vehicle and a tractor-trailer collided at 27th and Cornhusker Hwy. late Tuesday afternoon. The woman, Ardyth K. Rockemann, 27, of 2636 A St., suffered bumps and bruises, and was treated at Lincoln General Hospital and released, police said. The westbound Rockemann vehicle, turning left off of Cornhusker onto 27th St., collided with an eastbound truck driven by Dayle R. Horner, 44, of Bradshaw, police said.

UNL faculty looks at budget cuts

By Nancy Hicks
Star Staff Writer

Cut the teaching, research and service areas last, recommended the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate Tuesday.

the four-point recommendation covered ways to reduce proposed expenditures for the 1978-79 budget so that they more nearly correspond to the proposed income.

The recommendation included asking the Legislature for more tax money, making the cuts over several years rather than one year and suggesting that faculty members be involved in departmental decisions on proposed cuts.

The complicated budgetary problems involves a process which allows proposed spending to be above the anticipated income.

However, the differences can be on paper only. The university cannot actually spend more money than it receives.

The assumption is that within the $42 million instructional budget there will be some anticipated spending that won't be necessary — that people will retire or leave and those positions won't be filled right away, explained Ned Hedges, acting vice chancellor for academic affairs.

But in recent years this minus figure — the difference between the anticipated income from tuition, taxes and other revenues and the expected spending — has grown unmanageably large, according to Hedges.

The minus figure is expected to be about $1.5 million this year and $1.6 million next year, he said.

The problem with the minus figure began in 1973 when then UNL Chancellor James Zumberge promised to cut more than $1 million from Lincoln campus base budgets (for existing programs) at least partially in return for legislative support of his "areas of excellence" program.

The budget bill passed for the 1974-75 fiscal year reflected the $1 million cut on paper, but the actual cuts weren't all made that year.

In fact all the cuts still haven't been made.

And so each year UNL administrators have had to take crisis measures near the end of each fiscal year to bring the spending down to the income level. This has taken the form of carrying over bills into the next fiscal year, hiring freezes or other spending freezes, according to Hedges.

And Hedges thinks that now is the time to reduce that minus figure down to a manageable level. He is proposing that the $1.6 million minus figure for 1978-79 be cut in half.

Hedges told the Faculty Senate that his proposal on the cuts will probably include across the board percentage cuts for every area, plus selective cuts in certain areas.

That proposal will be presented to UNL deans Tuesday, Hedges said.

Asking the Legislature for more money is politically inadvisable, he said. And some possible solutions — like deleting certain programs entirely — cannot be done by the 1978-79 budget year.

The Faculty Senate recommendation asks that building, maintenance, operation, administration areas be cut first.

"I have no difficulty deciding between firing a professor or getting rid of a rose garden, or between firing a professor and turning off the tennis court lights at night," said James Lake, law professor.

PSC again votes to allow phone switch

The Nebraska Public Service commission stood by an earlier decision Tuesday allowing three couples from Ayr to switch telephone companies.

Aug. 23 the PSC voted 4-1 to allow the subscribers of the Glenwood Telephone Membership Corp., in Blue Hill, to switch to the Lincoln Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Again on Tuesday the vote was 4-1. Commissioner Duane Gay of Columbus cast the dissenting vote.

Commissioners Eric Rasmussen of Fairmont, Jack Romans of Ord, Harold Simpson of Lincoln and James Munnelly of Omaha agreed to the request.

The customers, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Reis, Mr. and Mrs. David Fredricks and Mr. and Mrs. Ryal Reis said most of their telephone calls are to areas served by LT&T's exchange in Hastings. The couples live on farms near Ayr, south of Hastings.

The Glenwood company opposed the application claiming the loss of three customers could adversely affect the firm's financial situation. The company has 2,300 subscribers, compared to LT&T which has more than 150,000.

The PSC ordered the couples to pay the Glenwood company about $3,000, which is what it costs the company to put in a telephone line to serve them.

World Series game tops Nielsen ratings

New York (AP) — NBC scored big during the week ending Oct. 23 with the concluding episodes of its "79 Park Avenue" mini-series, but ABC had four of the week's Top 10 programs and held onto its lead in television's ratings race, A.C. Nielsen figures show.

An estimated 21.8 million households tuned in Sunday evening, Oct. 17, for the second installment in the three-part NBC series based on Harold Robbins' novel, and about 20.2 million homes watched the conclusion the following night, Nielsen's figures showed.

But the concluding game of baseball's World Series between the New York Yankees and the Los Angeles Dodgers, on ABC Tuesday evening, was the week's most-watched program, and that night's pre-game show was ranked No. 5 for the week.

ABC had two more programs in the first 10, "Charlie's Angels," No. 4, and "Barney Miller," tied for No. 10, and finished the week with a 21.1 rating, ahead of NBC's 19.9 and CBS's 16.9. The networks have finished in that order each week since the new season began last month.

NBC's top-ranked programs were specials. CBS listed three series as its most-watched shows for the week, "Alice" and "All in the Family," tied for eighth, and "Hawaii Five-0," tied for 10th.

New series continued to suffer in the prime time ratings battle. ABC's "Love Boat" finished the week No. 23, the network's "Carter Country" No. 27, and CBS' "On Our Own" No. 30.

In order, the Top 10 shows for the week were:

World Series Game 6, Tuesday, a 33.9 rating representing 24.7 million homes, ABC; NBC Big Event, "79 Park Avenue," Part II, 29.9 or 21.8 million, and NBC Tuesday Movie, "79 Park Avenue," Part III, 27.7 or 20.2 million; "Charlie's Angels," 27.6 or 20.1 million, and World Series Pre-Game, Tuesday, 25.9 or 18.9 million, both ABC; NBC Saturday Night Movie, "Little Big Man," 23.4 or 17.1 million, and "Little House on the Prairie," 23 or 16.8 million, both NBC; "Alice" and "All in the Family," both 22.9 or 16.7 million, both CBS, and "Barney Miller," ABC, and "Hawaii Five-0," CBS, both 22.5 or 16.4 million.

The next 10 shows were:

NBC Big Event, "First 50 Years — A Closer Look;" "Barnaby Jones," CBS; "Welcome Back, Kotter," ABC; "60 Minutes," CBS; "What's Happening," ABC; "Kojak," CBS; "Happy Birthday Las Vegas," "Monday Night Football," "Eight is Enough" and "Donny and Marie," all ABC.

Wesleyan plans information day

Nebraska Wesleyan University will sponsor a high school senior information day Saturday.

Ron Johnson, director of admissions for the university, said registration starts at 8:30 a.m. in the Great Hall of the Smith-Curtis Building on the Wesleyan campus.

Woman is candidate for space

A "new era" is approaching in space travel, and, to Dr. Barbara Sauerland, the chance to be part of that era is "one of the biggest challenges 20th-century man can face."

Dr. Sauerland is a candidate to become one of 20 astronauts in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) space shuttle program.

Out of 220 applicants, 17 are women.

"I think my chances are very good," Dr. Sauerland said Tuesday at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. But, she adds, competition for the positions is keen.

The 20 astronauts will be selected by ability, with no consideration given to sex, race or creed. Dr. Sauerland believes that is a fair system.

Dr. Sauerland, now NASA medical officer at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, is in Lincoln to speak at a "Women in Science Careers Symposium." The three-day conference is sponsored by Graduate Women in Science at UNL.

Dr. Sauerland holds doctoral degrees in medicine and neurochemistry. She said future space exploration will require working scientists doing research in outer space.

"We now have the technology to put man in space," she said. "We are now going to learn how to use it."

Working in the field of "zero gravity" can unearth discoveries to advance industry and to better man's life on earth, she said.

NASA plans to rent space on flights to industries, Dr. Sauerland said, so scientists can learn to manufacture goods on the shuttle craft.

Dr. Sauerland said the space shuttle missions will last seven to 30 days.

The missions afford little privacy — most of the craft will be filled by "payload," she said.

Dr. Sauerland said she has already "gone through the mill" in a week of extensive psychological and physical testing. Men and women were administered identical tests, she said.

Dr. Sauerland said she will learn by Christmas if she has been selected for the space mission. NASA selects a new group of astronauts about once every 10 years.

THE CIVIC CENTER it's too good an idea to ignore.

On November 8, Lincoln will have another chance to approve an opportunity that makes good sense for the entire city . . . a plan that has already received wide-spread praise and support.

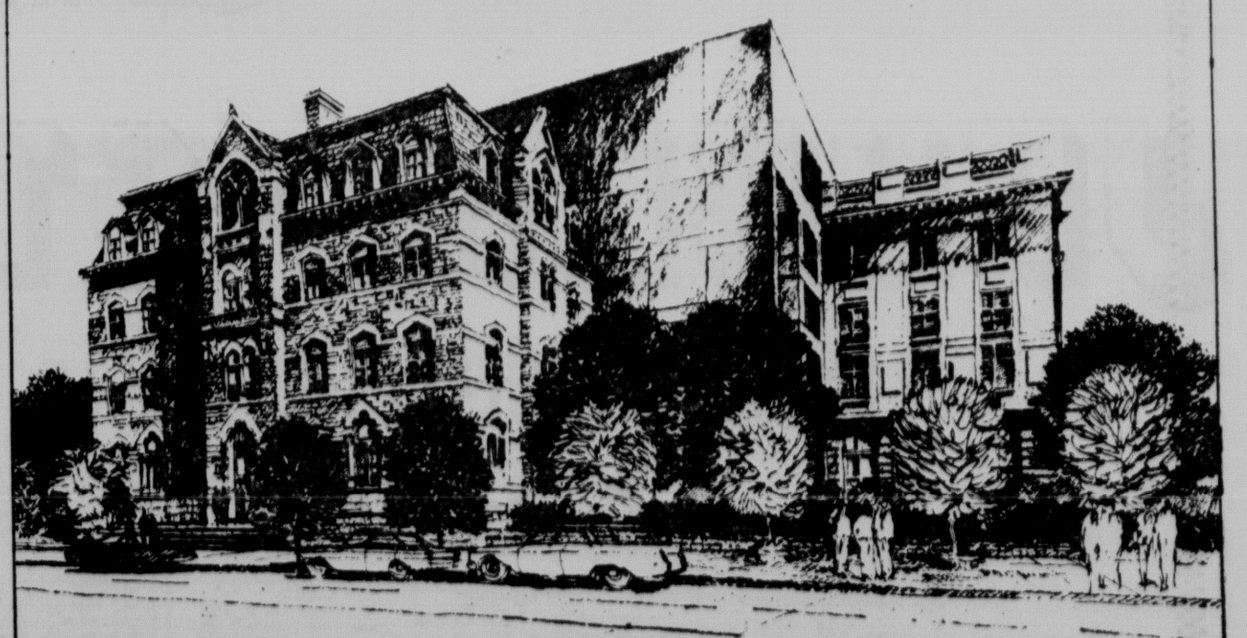
The Civic Center Plan calls for the renovation and preservation of Old City Hall and the Old Federal Building. Both would be restored to serve the city.

The Old Federal Building would provide needed city office space for Lincoln at a bargain rate. The preservation of these two historically important buildings would be assured.

The new link between these two landmarks would be the Civic Center Theatre portion of the complex. This 2,500 seat theatre would be housed within the large "U"-shaped opening on the south side of the Federal Building.

The theatre would host a variety of popular and performing arts attractions throughout the year. Existing auditoriums and theatres in Lincoln, although excellent for a number of uses, are not equipped to showcase the varied types of entertainment this facility would make possible.

In coming days watch for further details on this timely plan . . . then support this worthwhile opportunity for Lincoln by voting for the Civic Center Bond Issue on November 8.



Paid for by the Citizen's Committee for the Civic Center, Dick White, Chairman; E. N. Thompson, Treasurer.
801 N Street, Lincoln, NE 68508

Cigarettes, utilities tax hike urged

Scottsbluff (AP) — Former State Sen. Terry Carpenter urged an increase in the cigarette tax and a sales tax on utilities during a meeting of the Legislature's Revenue Committee.

There is no way that the Legislature will reduce either spending or taxes, Carpenter said at the Monday night meeting. The major problem before the panel is who will determine the tax burden, he said.

Questioning whether legislators have the courage to change the present tax system, Carpenter said, "You have too many people on your back to change.

"You don't represent the people," he said. "The Legislature collectively doesn't represent the people of the state five minutes of one day."

He criticized LB 131, which requires all counties to revalue property by 1978. "What does it mean?" he asked. "Nobody knows."

Carpenter said county assessors don't know how to apply the law.

"If you don't think farmers are hostile to various taxes wait until 1978 and find out who's running the country," he said.

Carpenter praised the Homestead Exemption Program which extends tax relief to limited income home owners 65 or older and disabled veterans.

Another witness, Ed Narjes of Sidney, urged the committee "to hold the line on spending.

"Don't raise taxes is the message being sent by Cheyenne County residents."

Narjes, a Cheyenne County commissioner, said county officials across the Panhandle don't want statewide property revaluation.

"You can't use a blanket guideline" to determine evaluations.

Gasohol use is considered by Senate study

Associated Press

A new study on gasohol concludes that "serious consideration should be made of its use as a gasoline extender," U.S. Sen. Carl Curtis said Tuesday.

The report was prepared by the research staff of the Senate Republican Conference and reviews technical and economic studies done to date on the feasibility of using alcohol in motor fuel.

Curtis presented the 80-page report to the Republican Policy Committee on Tuesday.

"It was discussed in light of energy legislation now before the Senate, and the current low farm prices for grain," his office said.

Curtis' office said the report sees ethyl alcohol made from grain and other farm products as a marketable use of farm surpluses.

Group to visit Carter officials

Democratic National Committeewoman Frances Ohmstede of Guide Rock Tuesday said a delegation from Nebraska and other states will press the Carter administration for 100% of farm parity and development of a grain alcohol program at meetings in Washington next month.

Mrs. Ohmstede said the group will meet with officials, including Carter domestic and agricultural advisors.

Kearney group tries again to save depot

Kearney (AP) — A second attempt will be made to preserve the Union Pacific depot for use as a community cultural and performing arts center.

Eight local groups Monday agreed to present a unified front in a formal letter to Union Pacific officials.

About two years ago railroad officials said the station was only 30 feet from the main line tracks and presented a danger. Gail Lowenberg of the Kearney Community Theater said Union Pacific executives appear now to be more receptive to a request to preserve the station.

The groups agreed that if the building had to be moved, it should be kept in the area to show Kearney's early railroad history.

Judge halts securities sales

United Press International

A federal judge in Colorado has permanently enjoined two Nebraska corporations and a Grand Island man from selling securities.

Judge Alfred Arraj signed a final judgment involving Hay Springs Corp. and Cornhuskers Associates Inc., both Nebraska corporations; Ray J. Beran of Grand Island, Andrew M. Kaminski of Lakewood, Colo., and Russell E. Griffith II of Dallas, Tex., and formerly of Lakewood; and Continental Colorado Corp., Beran Kaminski and Associates, and Dove Creek Association, all Colorado businesses.

The Denver regional office of the Securities and Exchange Commission said the civil action enjoined the defendants from violating registration and anti-fraud provisions of the U.S. securities laws.

The defendants consented to the injunction but did not admit or deny the allegations in the complaint.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Wednesday, October 26, 1977

The Moon is full: Expect more crimes of violence, more babies to be born, more fish to bite, more admissions to mental hospitals, a weather change in many parts of the world. Expect more zany telephone calls, mating activity among animals, romance among humans — and be ready for more people to blatantly expose their eccentricities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on keeping track of valuables, checking change, being positive concerning payments, collections and budget. Pisces, Virgo figure in picture. Individual who promises much may actually be suffering acute financial embarrassment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Cycle high take initiative, handle more responsibility — reward factor increases. Capricorn, Cancer individuals play significant roles. Stick to number "8". Older individual becomes ally — if you are patient, receptive and sincere.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish assignment, set sights on goal, deal with one who is aggressive and original. Light is shed on area which had been a "quagmire" of fear, doubt. Glamorous individual cares for you and makes no secret of it. You'll be more confident, creative — and happier.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on exciting relationship, friendship that becomes a "romance". Highlight originality, independence, creativity — dare to be you, Leo, Aquarius persons are in scenario. Stick to number "1". Yes, the "second chance" will bear fruit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can overcome red tape, minor officials — your chance for promotion, added prestige is enhanced as you utilize intuitive intellect. Cancer, Aquarius persons figure prominently — so does the number "1".

VIRGO (Aug. 22-Sept. 22): Emphasis on reading, writing, advertising, reaching more people with your "message." Key is to enlarge horizons, to realize you are not limited — and that you have a life of your own to live. Complaining relative needs sympathy, not obedience.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Mystery is solved — and you are beneficiary. Accent on accounts, leases, finances affecting partnership, marriage. Be thorough, frank, make point in economical manner. Means don't mince words — say what you mean and back up what you say.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on public acknowledgement of your efforts, contributions. Be analytical, avoid premature actions. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure prominently. Stick to number "5". Realize that member of opposite sex has right to make inquiries, to ask questions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Home or domestic change, adjustment indicated, featuring Taurus, Libra persons. Accent on vitality, employment, the way you get job done. Full Moon position coincides now with "confessions" from co-workers, relatives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar aspect coincides now with creative endeavors, significant changes, improved communication with children. You discern moods, detect subtle signals. Romantic involvement is strongly indicated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stick to factual data. Leave speculative ventures for another time and place. Older individual knows the score — you can get off sidelines and into game once you push aside false pride. Message should become increasingly clear. Yes, the structure is solid.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Realize when a situation — or a relationship — has run its course. Maintain balance, self-esteem. Short trip may be on agenda. Breathe fresh air of hope, optimism. And don't forget your sense of humor — it can now be a most valuable ally. Aries, Libra figure in scenario.

IF OCTOBER 26th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are forceful, willing to fight when the cause is right. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. You've made significant home or domestic changes this year — you'll be rid of a burden in December, ready to chart a more independent, creative course. Money picture should be bright in November.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
